Fish Die In Pond

BLODGETT -- The heavy use of water for irrigation is blamed for the loss of about 50 large catfish and bass due to lack of oxygen in a one-fourth acre pond on the property of Byron Wyman of Blodgett.

"My pond has been going dry for the past month, due to lack of rain and the fact that the 19-foot water table, which fed water into the pond, has been lowered by the use of water for irrigation on fields in the vicinity," Wyman explained.

He said that several youths garnered "some three dozen catfish from the pond Sunday, but I don't know whether they lived or not. All I can do now is to hope it will come a big rain and add oxygen to the pond so that many other fish I know are in the pond won't be killed," he added.

The pond is located some eight miles from Sikeston on the Blodgett road, just South of where the overpass passes over I-55.

Some of the catfish would weigh in at around 10 pounds each.

Braden Heads Lions Club

CHARLESTON -- Leonard Braden, a salesman for Simmons Equipment Co., Charleston, was elevated from vice-president to the president of the Charleston Lions Club here last night at the annual officer installation meeting.

He succeeds George Roberts, manager of the Mississippi County ASC office. Sheriff W. J. "Pedro" Simmons, named "Lions Man of the Year for 1969" installed the officers.

Other officers installed included Tom Wells, first vice-president; Joseph Reeves, second vice-president; H. R. Hequemborg, secretary-treasurer; Herbert Marshall, tail twister, and W. S. Babb, first assistant tail twister and Elbert Waide, Lions farmer.

New members of the board of directors include O. T. Dalton, Larry Long and Dennis Quertermous.

The Lions had a barbecue supper, at the Charleston Country Club as they also celebrated "Ladies Night."

Incoming President Braden suggested that more "Ladies Nights" be held, since it seemed that attendance always picked up when the ladies were invited to attend the meetings.

Announced as winners of "perfect attendance pins" from Lions International for their perfect attendance record, during the past year, were: J. Abner Beck, H. R. Hequemborg, J. H. Marshall and George Roberts.

Two Injured In Four-Car Accident

Two persons were injured in a four-car accident yesterday two miles east of Wyatt on Highway 60, the Highway Patrol reported today.

Seriously injured is Carl Howard, 41, Lynnvelle, Ky., and critically injured is William Thompson, 76, Big Sandy, Tenn.

Howard is at St. Mary's Hospital at Cairo, Ill., and Thompson is at Missouri Delta Community Hospital in Sikeston.

The accident occurred when a 1967 Chevrolet sedan, driven by Eris Mae, route three, Charleston, slowed down to make a left turn off of Highway 60. Mae was traveling east.

Thompson, driving behind Mae, slowed down his 1960 Buick Sedan to allow Mae to turn.

Francisco Dealejandro, 56, was driving a 1960 Dodge Van Truck behind Thompson. Dealejandro's truck ran into the Buick driven by Thompson causing Thompson's Buick to hit the Chevrolet driven by Mae.

When the Chevrolet was hit, it went crossways into the road and was hit by a 1969 Plymmouth driven by Howard, who was traveling west.

Dealejandro was arrested for following too closely.

Rogers Says Combat Lull May Speed Troop Recalls

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State William P. Rogers said today that battle activity in Vietnam in the last week may have dropped to the lowest level of the war and he indicated this could increase U.S. troop withdrawals if the lull continues.

Rogers also told a news conference that "we know pretty conclusively" that the infiltration of North Vietnamese troops into South Vietnam has declined in the last two or three months but the reason for this is not not clear.

Rogers cautioned that the reason for the battlefield lull is not yet quite clear either, saying more time would be required to decide whether it was politically significant.

He said, however, that "we hope this is a response to the announcement by President Nixon and President Thieu of South Vietnam at Midway." The Midway announcement June 8 disclosed Nixon's decision to withdraw 25,000 American troops by the end of August.

One question asked Rogers was whether the United States would react to the lower level of combat now apparent, assuming that it proved to be significant.

He recalled that one of Presiden Nixon's stated criteria for withdrawing forces from Vietnam was the level of enemy military activity in the field.

"Obviously if the level of hostility continues and it is significantly lower," Rogers said, "that would effect our decisions on further troop replacements withdrawals."

At another point he said, "If the rate of combat falls off to a very small level obviously our plans will change."

Rogers was questioned about whether the Nixon administration was studying proposals for a cease- fire in Vietnam. He said a cease- fire did not appear to be practical in the absence of an agreement on troop withdrawal on both sides which, he argued, would automatically lower the level of combat.

He was then asked whether even if the enemy reduced combat activity the United States would, as the questioner said, keep the pressure on.

"If we find the other side if not fighting as they have been," Rogers said on this issue, "We'll have to review our military position."

Rogers said he had talked with Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird immediately before going into the news conference.

He said: "He told me that last week we had the lowest level in combat activity in Vietnam in a long time-possibly during the whole war."

"We don't know the meaning of this," Rogers said.

Attempt to Salvage Ship

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A spokesman for the Santa Maria Corp., said an attempt would be made to salvage the 80-foot replica of Columbus' famous flagship which broke away from its moorings during a weekend storm, drifted two miles and sank.

"Our report indicates that the ship can be saved," Anthony F. Sansone said. "We intend to make every effort to expedite saving her." Sansone said divers would begin removing artifacts from the Spanish-built tourist attraction formerly exhibited at the New York World's Fair.

"We've had many calls from people who wanted to know if the Santa Maria could be saved and offering help. The people have been great and we are going to do everything we can to bring the ship back for them."

Preliminary Sewer Plans at Miner

MINER -- The Miner Board of Trustees did not take action last night on a liquor by the drink ordinance. The ordinance remains to be finalized by the city's attorney, Tom Arnold. A special meeting probably will be called next week regarding the ordinance.

In last night's meeting, City Clerk Mrs. Anna Lewis reported June tax collections of $1,091, which included a $566 franchise tax payment from Missouri Utilities.

A preliminary study regarding a sewage system for the city is underway to determine costs and needs. A meeting will be held with officials of the Department of Housing and Urban Development. A 50 per cent grant is under consideration.

It was also announced the State Department of Health will make its final inspection Monday of the city's new water system.

East Prairie City Manager Issue Narrowly Approved

BY SHIRLEY PRITCHETT

EAST PRAIRIE -- East Prairie voters voted in a change in government here yesterday. Final returns showed a 26-vote majority for the change to city manager form of government from mayor-alderman.

With a great deal of aid from Ward, where sponsors of the city manager operation voted 321 to 268 for its adoption, the final results showed 469 favoring the change and 443 voting for retention of the present system. About 20 absentee votes remain to be counted, but their count cannot change the final results.

The change came after voters had been deluged with claims of superiority from both sides. The city manager sponsors, including the mayor and aldermen, the Chamber of Commerce and the various civic clubs had vied with their opponents, mostly the more elderly residents who thought they couldn't afford a city manager. Hot words were passed back and forth and many families split their votes, according to reports.

The campaign to gain a city manager was initiated during graduation ceremonies at the high school when Mayor Lloyd Hogan, who favored city managership, said East Prairie is "the only town in the nation where you take a bath and get dirtier." He was referring to the dire need for updating the city's water and sewerage systems.

With a city manager the mayor and city council will still determine expenditures. The city manager is expected to be paid a minimum of $7,500 per year plus expenses. The city manager is expected to be found outside East Prairie, since Mayor Hogan says he doesn't believe "any of our citizens wants the job, or is qualified for it."

The mayor was congratulated by Joe Webb, president of the East Prairie Chamber of Commerce shortly after the official count was announced and then a host of workers for the new form of government visited with Hogan, who said simply:

"I'm out of an administrative job at last, and I'm glad of it. With a hard working city manager, who has time to devote to this job, I'm sure that East Prairie will soon be in a position to offer prospective manufacturing concerns just the right setup that will gain us additional industry." A garment plant and another small muffler plant is presently located in East Prairie.

The mayor said a meeting probably will be held Thursday or Friday night to establish a list of candidates for the city manager's position.

"We must all pull together now to make East Prairie the best town in the Bootheel area," the mayor pleaded.

The interest was shown in the fact that a total of 932 of a possible 947 qualified voters turned out to cast their ballots, the largest turnout percentage wise in the town's history.

Voting was held at the City Hall and at the Lions Club building for Wards One and Two. Presiding at Ward One were Mrs. John Griffin and Mrs. Mary Ann Parker as managers and Mrs. Ernest McMikle and Mrs. Bernice Anthony as clerks. In Ward Two Mrs. Evelyn Denton and Mrs. Grace Emory served as judges and Mrs. Nina Hunter and Mrs. Franklin Morris as clerks.

Man Escapes Briefly From Mississippi County Jail

From Charleston Bureau of the Daily Standard

By PEGGY GRISSOM
STAFF WRITER

CHARLESTON — A 19-year-old St. Louis man, armed with a .22 caliber pistol, escaped briefly this morning from the Mississippi County Jail, Sheriff W. J. "Pedro" Simmons reported. Leonard Truman Wendell, who was being held on a bad check charge, escaped about 10:30 p.m. and was captured about 30 minutes later by Charleston police about one-half mile from the jail.

Wendell had requested Deputy Gordon Galemore to come up to his cell regarding some clothes. He pulled the pistol on Galemore and placed him in the cell. Wendell then threatened a jail trustee, Bob Bonta, whom he had encountered in a hallway.

Wendell then proceeded to Sheriff Simmon's office where the sheriff was talking with two visitors, James and Elmer Hall. He pulled the gun on the trio. Simmons tried to talk Wendell into surrendering the gun to him, but Wendell ordered Sheriff Simmons and his two visitors to go to the cell block. Simmons said he left the office and locked the door to his office as he left. Simmons then called Charleston City Police to alert them to set up road blocks throughout the city.

Meanwhile Wendell left Simmons' office, going into a lot behind the IGA Store immediately in front of the jail. He finally emerged on Green Street from Commercial, Simmons said.

City Policeman Glenn Hornbeck spotted Wendell going down Green, but Wendell saw the officer about the same time and ducked behind a car parked behind the Economy Furniture Store on Green Street.

What then could have been a shootout failed to materialize as Wendell, after pulling his pistol on Officer Hornbeck, had second thoughts and meekly surrendered when Hornback started to "pull down" on the escapee with his service revolver.

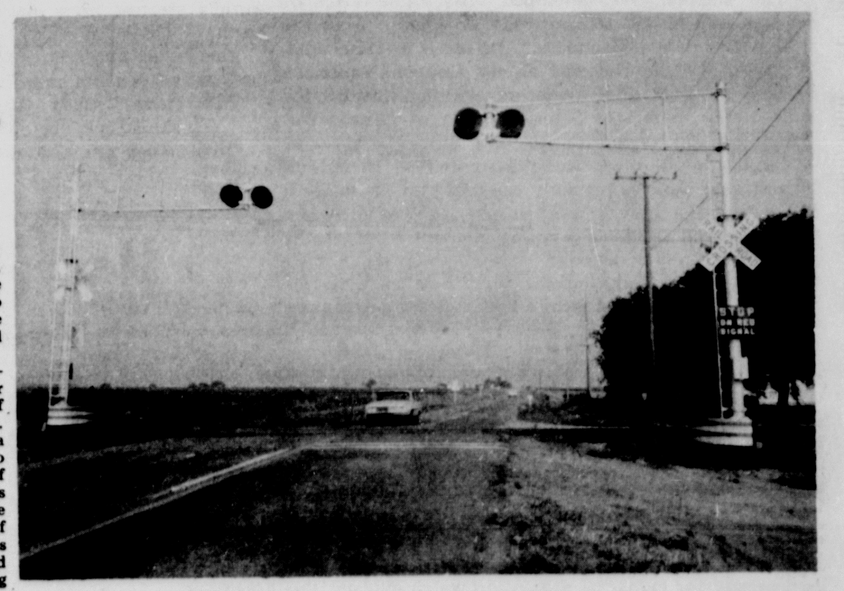
Sheriff Simmons said that charges will be filed against the escapee and could cover more than one charge.

The sheriff said he expected to announce the name and arrest of an accomplace who Simmons said passed the .22 caliber gun to Wendell yesterday when Wendell received a quart of milk between 1 p.m. and 2 p.m.

"We know that the gun was sneaked into Wendell by a visitor who delivered the milk to him," Simmons explained.



FLASHING LIGHT SIGNALS estimated to cost $12,000 have been installed at the railroad crossing on Salcedo Road. For the Missouri Public Service Commission to order such a light, one or more conditions must exist, trains speeds should exceed 60 miles per hour, railroad and highway traffic should exceed 1,200 vehicles per day, at least one train should pass through per day or restricted visibility should exist. The highway department paid 90 per cent of the cost and the railroad paid 10 per cent.

Interstate Safety Program Announced for Next Year

Survey parties have begun compiling data for a Safety Modification Program which will begin on Interstate 55 and 57 near the first of the year, William H. Shaw, executive engineer, District 10 Highway Department, said today.

The program will cause workmen to change guard rails, signs and medium obstructions so the devices will comply with traffic rules, hich have recently gone into effect.

Guard rails will be modified so the end of them will curve down and be fastened to the ground. They are presently curved out toward the highway and are easily sent through automobiles during accidents.

With the rails fastened downward to the ground, they will be less likely to cut through an automobile in case of an accident.

The drainage devices used now will be removed and flush grates will be installed.

Also, highway signs will be moved to different positions to assure more safety.

The Safety Modification Program was set up by the federal Bureau of Public Roads and adopted by the Missouri State Highway Commission.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!
RUBBER STAMP?

Congress has more power to curb the Supreme Court than it has used. Confirmation has been a "rubber stamp," and the power of impeachment has never been used on a Supreme Court justice.

The Constitution provides another avenue of relief, which Congress could take by simple legislation: Article III, Section 2, establishes authority for Congress to limit jurisdiction of the court in any field it chooses. In effect, Congress could say to the court: you shall not adjudicate in the fields we have designated.

In some cases, Congress can overcome the effect of particular decisions by statutory enactment, expecially when spelling out the intent of Congress. Also, in the opinion of many constitutional lawyers, Congress could, by simple statute, establish an age limit for mandatory retirement. Such a limit would not necessarily affect the court's philosophy, but it would open up fresh opportunities for control by confirmation.

Other controls would require constitutional amendments. One such amendment could set additional qualifications for Supreme Court justices, such as a requirement that candidates have had at least five years service in the highest trial court in a state or on a court with appellate jurisdiction. This would limit membership on the Supreme Court to experienced judge event purely political appointments.

Constitutional amendments also would be required to limit the term to a set period or to require periodic reconfirmation of justices. Constitutional amendments can also be drawn to protect specific rights, such as ine fields of school prayer or legislative apportionment.

Rear-end highway collisions between cars and farm machinery declined 32 per cent in Michigan during the first year the state adopted a law requiring use of the triangular Show - Moving Vehicle emblem, despite the fact that the law was in effect for only the last nine months of that year, 1967.

This is the finding of a recent study conducted by the Agricultural Engineering department of Michigan State University. The report concludes that "use of the SMV emblem will significantly reduce such rear-end collisions on public highways."

The triangular emblem, 16 inches on a side, has a red reflective border that shines brightly in the headlights of oncoming cars at night and an orange fluorescent center for daytime visibility. Adopting its SMV law last year. Michigan became one of 10 states having such legislation involving vehicles designed to travel no faster than 25 m.p.h. on the highway.

The MSU study used data from Michigan State Police records listing 133 rear-end collisions involving automobiles and farm machinery during 1966. In all cases, the cars hit the machinery while the latter was either moving straight ahead or was stopped on the highway. Last year, however, only 89 such accidents occurred - a reduction of 32 per cent.

The emblem was developed after three years of research at Ohio State University on a grant from the Automotive Safety Foundation. Its use is recommended by the ASF, the National Safety Council, American Society of Agricultural Engineers, National Institute for Farm Safety, National Safety League of Canada and many other such organizations.

Studies show there are a minimum of 12 million slow-moving vehicles regularly operating on the nation's highways. In a typical year, they're involved in nearly 8,000 rear-end accidents resulting in about 2,000 deaths and injuries.

The MSU study indicates that these tragic figures could be cut by at least a third if all states would require use of the SMV emblem.

The retail trade boom of 1967 will soar into 1968, extensions of private and government economists indicate.

Expectations of more business should be a prime factor in the planning of advertising budgets for the new year. The retailer who does not anticipate progress when allocating funds for advertising is likely to fall behind more dynamic competitors.

The first essential of effective advertising is a carefully planned budget. Too many retailers arbitrarily set aside a fixed sum from year to year to be spent haphazardly, without regard to seasonal demand or the effectiveness of various advertising media.

Poorly planned advertising may result in a shortage of funds when advertising is needed most. It may result in inconsistent and ineffective advertising. It may result in the expenditure of advertising funds for donations which do not contribute to sales.

Sloppy planning of advertising, or no planning at all, reflects a belief in a static economic situation. However, the retailer cannot live on a plateau. When consumer demand moves, the seller must also move or fall behind.

A good advertising budget uses past records as a guide only for evaluating anticipations of growth. It carefully spreads espenditures to reach the consumer during periods of peak demand. It firmly restricts advertising funds to legitimate advertising. Without regard to sentiment and pressure, the good advertising budget insures that the most efficient advertising media are used.

BILLY GRAHAM IN NEW YORK

Two summers ago, the Rev. Dr. Billy Graham undertook to persuade Swinging London to make a decision for Christ. It was then known that the evangelist planned a similar crusade in New York City in 1969 -- 12 years after his first eight-week crusade there. As always, Dr. Graham is true to his word. A 10-day crusade will open in Madison Square Garden on Friday, June 13.

Dr. Graham's 1969 crusade will be aimed at young people, who are more disillusioned with organized religion than are their elders. No less than 70 per cent of respondents to a recent (May 31) Gallup Poll stated that religion is losing its influence over life in the United States, while only 14 per cent thought it was increasing its influence. The results almost completely reversed those of a similar 1957 poll, in which 69 per cent of the respondents said they thought religion was increasing its influence on American life, and 14 per cent said they thought it was losing influence.

These results understate the feelings of younger people. Of the college - student respondents in the recent Gallup Poll, 78 per cent said they thought religion was losing ground. An earlier Gallup survey of 85 high school seniors and juniors in Westfield, N. J., found 90 per cent on the "losing influence" side. For his part, Dr. Graham says he has "practically given up on the older generation" but has "a lot of faith in young people searching for meaning and purpose in their lives."

Dr. Graham is viewed as a square by many young people, but no one question his integrity in a time when personal integrity is doubted. His squareness may even by an asset. John Corry, writing about Dr. Graham in HARPER'S (February 1969), notes that the evangelist was aware that hippies called their footwear "Jesus boots." Dr. Graham's conclusion, as reported by Corry: "Many psychologists say this reflects a longing for Jesus."

NEW YORK (AP) — The trouble with middle age is that most of the people undergoing it don't know how to relax and enjoy it.

They tend to regard it as teen-agers do acne—something they'd like to hide if they could. They see it as an affliction, not a blessing.

But every period of life has its advantages—yes, even middle age. For example, when you're middle-aged—

It is no longer really necessary to waste money buying alarm clocks. Your conscience will wake you up.

While every work day does get to feel like Monday, that means you look forward with five times as much eagerness toward Saturday and Sunday.

As there are fewer women older than you, there are fewer that you have to get up and yield your bus seat to.

It doesn't take you so long to comb your hair, and the time you save can be put to more constructive use.

Realizing she must conserve your waning energy, your wife is more willing to take the dog for a walk in bad weather. She may even pitch in and help shovel the snow off the driveway in winter.

As your diet no longer allows you to eat gravy, it becomes impossible for you to spill it on a new necktie.

Many people in the upper reaches of middle age no longer have to tire themselves out brushing their teeth. They can simply take them out and soak them in a glass overnight.

Who has to go to P-TA meetings? Other people, yes. You, no. Your fledglings have flown away.

Being able now to look at women more realistically and less romantically, you're surprised to find that many of them are really pretty nice people and actually not bad company.

Your children have reached an age where they are no longer ashamed of you—and you are no longer so afraid they'll wind up in jail.

The probability emerges that you will outlast the mortgage on your home after all.

Perhaps you've passed the point where you can look forward to a major promotion. On the other hand, you've been around so long that the boss would hesitate to fire you without thinking twice about it. And since thinking is hard work for your boss, he is unlikely to do it twice.

No longer do you stay at a cocktail party until after midnight. You have learned that the only important thing that happens at a party after midnight is trouble.

Yes, middle age can be downright pleasurable. The only way it could be improved would be for it to come about 25 years later in life, then last 25 years longer.

STRENGTHENING THE SYSTEM AMERICAN

One of the most successful and respected merchandising institutions in the nation is providing an outstanding example of the new progressivism of leading businessmen. In a special issue of Penney News, the Chairman of J.C. Penney Co., Mr. W.M. Batten, reveals his philosophy in a few words: "Equal treatment does not produce equal opportunity. It takes something more . . . . In business, there are times in everyone's career when he or she requires not only equal but special treatment. I look back on several occasions when businessmen went out of their way to give me special help. These were turning points of my career . . . In our families--don't we concentrate on the child who needs our help the most? This is to give him equal opportunity. Our action is based upon the need."

Other sections of the special issue of Penney News show how the company is carrying out with deeds of the philosophy of its Chairman. Under the JOBS Program, founded by the National Alliance of Businessmen, this retail distribution firm is now filling hundreds of positions with minority group members.

This is a lesson for all of us in the current drive to create more opportunities in private enterprise. The most successful employers of the jobless are those who have worked,profited and built strong companies in a free market. The very retail distributors who have often been subjected to opportunity killing legislation and regulation have been the first to come forward and offer opportunities to the hard-core unemployed. They know what opportunity means in the life of a man, as well as of a company.

With all those sex education courses, why would a kid prefer to be a dropout?'

I think I've finally cured my husband of coming home in the wee hours of the morning," the wife proudly announced on New Year's Day. "Last night, when I heard him fumbling downstairs, I yelled: "Is that you, Harold?"

"How has that cured him?" questioned her friend.

"His name is Charles."

TRENDS: There's fashion news in the belts now being shown in stores. Buckles are big and brassy, sometimes antiqued. Most have a handsome look. There's a new trend in wearing these belts, too -- such as at hip-height over a long sweater or sportshirt . . . One custom-tailoring detail that is catching on fast is the deep inverted pleat, in place of an open vent on the new clothes. Men like it . . . Underwear makers are following the lead of shirt manufacturers by introducing undershirts and shorts in deep and bright dress shirt color tones. It may be another step toward coordinations - it certainly brightens up the inner look as well as the outer look!

Price Vs. Free Sample

When conducting business by mail, it would seem obvious that an offer of a free sample will outpull a sample with a price on its head. Not necessarily so. Often a 10 cents offer, a 25 cents offer and even a dollar offer will bring in more response than a free offer.

It is well worth testing because if your offer should bring in more cash replies, you not only reduce your inquiry cost but you get better qualified leads for the follow-up.

After placing some flowers on a grave in a cemetery, a man noticed an old Chinese placing a bowl of rice on nearby grave and cynically asked: "What time do you expect your friend to come up and eat the rice?"

The Chinese replied with a smile: "Same time your friend comes up to smell the flowers."

FARMS: When last year's California state budget was presented, it was pointed out that state mental hospitals had a budget of $742,000 to run farm and food processing operations. These institutions had a total of 11,311 acres of land - with only 2,488 acres devoted to buildings. There were reported 2,717 acres in crops, 1,208 acres in pasture, and 3,973 acres in forest or brush.

Plastics Flourish
In Winter Sports

Plastic skis are making their mark on the nation's slopes this year, according to Chemical and Engineering News, with plastic clothing and plastic boots also enjoying wide popularity. The proportion of plastic skis alone is expected to jump from 16 percent in 1968 to more than 40 percent of the total ski market by 1970, the magazine says. More than $220 million was spent by 2 million skiers on ski clothing and equipment during the last season, the report notes.

About $30 million worth of chemicals and plastics is used to make skiers clothes and boots and another $30 million goes into the skis. The skiers themselves aare increasing in numbers at the rate of 15 to 20 percent each year.

BUSINESS is doing more for real progress than all other human lactivities combined. By business I mean the production and distribution of goods. Unless commerce is efficiently conducted, little else of importance can be accomplished.

Our conservation and our literature are built around the froth of life. We talk about dancers, comedians, actors, painters, sculptors and writers at the dinner table, but if through a miscalculation on the part of some businessman, such a small item as sugar is missing from our table, we talk about little else but sugar. It is because the essentials for comfortable existence are so nicely adjusted that we can indulge ourselves in pleasant discussion of the non-essentials.

It is easy to cheer a great orator, but it requires imagination to cheer the men who devise the system which insures the regular delivery of food. Yet the latter are as deserving of cheers as the former.

Washington - Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

Drew Pearson and Jack Anderson say: Internal Revenue is checking Don Nixon's taxes; Don is looking for clients; he made one mysterious trip to the White House

WASHINGTON--The Internal Revenue service now has the delicate duty of "auditing" the income tax returns of the President's younger brother, Don Nixon.

Actually a tax investigation of Don was initiated by Internal Revenue in the last administration, but Don asked that it be postponed. The Johnson administration agreed, so now Internal Revenue is in the position of scrutinizing the tax returns of the President's brother at a time when the President controls it.

Meanwhile evidence accrues that Don Nixon has been trying to capitalize once again on his brother's fame. This is not exactly new for Don. While Richard was Vice President, Don tried to establish a chain of drive-in restaurants which featured a triple-decker sandwich called the "Nixonburger." To finance the venture and pay bad debts hd borrowed $205,000 from the Hughes Tool Company.

The Nixonburger never became a threat to the hamburger of cheeseburger, however, and the Drive-In idea flopped. The $205,000 loan, secured by a mortgage of lot 10 or Whittier Boulevard in Whittier, Calif. -- a piece of real estate that no bank would have accepted as security for a loan of that size--was never repaid. The Nixon family lot is now registered in the name of the Hughes Tool Company.

Don also incorporated himself and began selling shares to eager Republicans who might want to curry favor with the Vice President. This idea backfired when an embarrassed Richard Nixon found out about it and quietly put the Kibosh on Donald Nixon, Inc.

Unabashed, Don continued to wheel and deal, once had to be bailed out by his famous brother for several thousand dollars. Not long after Richard was elected, Don began boasting to friends that he expected to make a million dollars during the next four years. As the first step, he negotiated a substantial raise in his own salary from Ogden foods, a vending machine company which he represents in California.

--Eye Out For Clients--

He also made contact with John Hill, President of educational play, a Boston company that manufacturers playground equipment. Hill has made a pitch for some of the "New Money" that President Nixon has authorized for cleaning up riot areas.

Hill insisted to this column that Don Nixon didn't offer to help wangle playground grants from the Nixon administration, but that he was interested merely in representing the company on the West Coast. In any case, Don wrote Hill an abrupt letter, withdrawing from the deal, after he learned we were investigating.

Don also showed up at the White House the other morning with Elmer Stone, Assistant General counsel for Ryan Aeronautical company, in tow. Stone has largely taken over the duties of B.K. Goodman, the General counsel, who has been in poor health.

Ryan Aeronautical is reported to be in need of government contracts to improve its financial situation. To get favored treatment from the Nixon administration, Stone apparently sought to take advantage of his friendship with Don Nixon.

A company spokesman, when queried by this column, claimed that Stone has been Don's legal adviser. He alibied that the two traveled all the way to Washington merely to notify the White House that the relationship had been severed.

It is, of course, highly unusual for a corporate counsel, without an independent practice of his own, to serve as an outsider's personal attorney. Nevertheless the company spokesman insisted that Stone wanted to tell the White House in person--because Ryan is a defense contractor--that he is no longer Don Nixon's Attorney.

Whatever the motive, it is a fact that Nixon and Stone together called upon White House aide John Ehrlichman. What they said and did is one of those secrets which do not come under the new Nixon communications complex. Ehrlichman refused to talk about the visit.

It would seem, however, that, in view of Don's past wheeling-dealing, the public should be entitled to know the details of what the President's brother was doing in the White House with a defense contractor.

--Badly Needed Education--

Without any fanfare, President Nixon has been bringing student radicals to the White House for private talks. They've been organized by Bud Wilkinson, the University of Oklahoma Coach, now on the White House staff, but Henry Kissinger and other top advisers have also participated.

These advisers have given Nixon a blunt report on the education gap, namely that big-city schools are getting more children but less money, that the taxpayers are also rebelling against additional property taxes to increase the school budgets, and the only solution is federal assistance to big-city schools. It has been suggested that it may take $8 billion a year to bring our deteriorating schools back up to standard.

Meanwhile, the students for a democratic society and the black panthers have joined forces in some cities. They have also increased in number.

A year ago, there were only 70 black panthers in the United States--all located in the San Francisco area. Now there are over 1,600 black panthers in 45 cities. They are dedicated to guerrilla warfare and have already started assassinating policemen. They also have direct ties to their leader, Eldridge Cleaver, who is hiding out in Cuba.

By joining forces with the SDS, the Black Panthers hope to convert the SDS from mere campus disorder to outright guerrilla warfare in the big cities. They are also attempting to infiltrate the labor unions and stir up trouble there.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

HEARD ON THE LEFT:

The New Revolution And an Old Stop Watch

Washington, D. C.: -- This is a tale of one city and two conventions -- the national gatherings of the New Left and the Democratic Party. The SDS attended both concalves -- one on the outside with staves and one on the inside with muscle and Maoist malice for all. Time: the present. Place: Chicago, of course.

When all the reports of the SDS 9th National "Convention," replete with gory stories of bodyguarded speakers, fistfights, mauling, hauling, howling, pouncing on microphones, cheering for Che Guevara, hysteria for "Ho Ho Ho" were in, I sought out the 42-year-old Congressman John Murphy (N.Y.). He was parliamentarian of the 1968 Democratic National Nominating Convention.

Carefully, from his records and time sheets, we reconstructed the procedure at the convention -- as it was operated inside the control center while the SDS was outside the Hilton, the convention headquarters' hotel.

Here's the record. Here's what was happening behind the Chicago International Amphitheatre podium while the New Left shouted that Democratic Party leaders were not reflecting the will of the delegates, nor the sentiment of the people nor the sheer essence of democratic procedure.

"I was persona non grata with some groups," says Jack Murphy in that crisp, executive fighting-Irish tone of his, "who felt that the convention was too authoritarian and favored one candidate. I'll just recount some instances where the application of the (convention) rules was liberally applied."

Congressman Murphy's record shows that the time consumed in the nomination of candidates for president by the minority more than doubled that spent on Hubert Humphrey.

The nominating speech for Sen. Eugene McCarthy -- 40 minutes; Senator George McGovern -- 41 minutes; Reverend Channing Philips -- 32 minutes; and Vice President Hubert Humphrey -- 32 minutes.

"On the night of nomination for Vice President," adds Jack Murphy, "the name of Julian Bond was placed in nomination by Donald Peterson of Wisconsin.

"Bond's name had not been sent to the Secretary of the Convention, nor had Peterson sent his name to the Secretary as required under the rules of the Convention. These rules were made so that some order could be maintained and a program set forth.

"Members from various state delegations came to the platform protesting that Julian Bond did not meet the Constitutional requirements to be Vice President. However, his name still was permitted to remain in contention until Georgia was recognized. At that time Bond withdrew himself as a candidate and mentioned that his age was a limiting factor."

The third liberal application by Mr. Murphy came during the debate over the anguished issue of the Vietnam war.

Congressman Murphy extended the time from one to two hours. The minority plank was given half the time. The anti-Vietnam block's time was to be controlled by Rep. Philip Burton (Calif.), its official spokesman.

All of the minority's 60 minutes was consumed by delegates pleading passionately for their cause. I heard no howls. No one attempted to seize the microphone. There was no violence. No delegate had to be accompanied to the podium or mike by gun-carrying bodyguards so characteristic of the SDS "convention" 10 months later. The very thought of such melodramatics at a Democratic (or Republican) convention amused Mr. Murphy.

Then came the turn for the next to the last scheduled anti-Vietnam speaker, Ted Sorensen, intimate of the late Jack Kennedy.

"Ted Sorensen took all of the time alloted to Sen. Wayne Morse," asserts Mr. Murphy, "who was to be the concluding speaker. Although the (minority's) full 60 minutes had been used, Morse was not limited in his remarks -- although no compensating time was given to the majority plank. The purpose of the losely time requirements such as these was to obviate any criticism that people were cut off from speaking or denied the right to speak. The Convention rules were in order and naturally favored no particular candidate."

Compare this procedure with the chaotic "delegations" at the SDS sessions in the Coliseum. Compare this with the splits, splinters, expulsions, vituperation, and disregard for democratic procedure or controlled traditional registration of delegates. Compare the authority of delegates at both conventions -- the ballotbox election of delegates to the Democratic convention -- and the flooding of the Colisum by packs of SDS (regulars) and bands of Progressive Labor Party-Worker - Student Alliance orthodox Maoists brought in by bus and special planes.

Now that the SDS have had their crack at democracy within their own ranks brutishly as well as amateurishly, they now claim the intellectual right to be the critics of "the establishment"?

They can't even clean their own hall.

Thirty Years Married, And Still Blissful

Dear Readers: This may be just another day to you, but it is a very special day in my life. Thirty years ago, on a sweltering Sunday afternoon in Sioux City, Iowa, Jules Lederer slipped a plain gold band on my finger and I became his wife.

Honesty forbids me describing myself as a student at Morningside College, so I'll simply say I was enrolled there. Jules had had one year at Northwestern -- High School, that is. He was a product of Detroit, handsome, energetic, imaginative, a born optimist and eager to take on the world. He had a good job and a promising future. He was also broke.

I was an effervescent, fun-loving girl, hopelessly square, driven by a crusading spirit to save the world -- sort of a Jewish Joan of Arc. I was also engaged to marry a law student in California. But Jules, never one to be discouraged by small obstacles, asked me to marry him anyway. I said yes and the wedding took place three months later.

We were blessed the following year with a baby girl, Margo. From then on, I saw more of the moving van than I saw of Jules. When an opportunity for advancement arose, he took it. And it seemed always to be in another city. We moved from Sioux City to St. Louis, from St. Louis to New Orleans, from New Orleans to Milwaukee. Then came World War II and Jules served in the Infantry. In 1945 we moved from Little Rock to Los Angeles, from Los Angeles to Eau Claire, Wisconsin, and from Eau Claire to Chicago.

Time, that subtle thief of youth, is often cursed by those who long to stop the clock, or turn it back, but we want none of that. Each year has been better than the last because we have grown together. A good marriage, it is said, is made in heaven. This might be true, but the maintenance work must be done right down here. A successful marriage is not a gift, it is an achievement. No real marriage can exist without differences in opinion and the ensuing battles. But battles can be healthy. They bring to marriage the vital principle of equal partnership. If there is a secret to making marriage work it is "Never go to bed mad."

Our 30 years together have been blessed with good health, good fortune, good friends, good times and success. Jules says he could not have made it without me. I am not sure he is right. But I could not have made it without him. and of this I am certain. He taught me how to be alone without feeling sorry for myself. He taught me never to back away from a challenge -- that it is better to try and fail and then to try again. He taught me how to use my time productively. His work habits are impeccable. I learned mine from him.

Being Mrs. Jules Lederer has been superb training for Ann Landers. Thirty years with this unselfish, supportive, responsive man has enabled me to live life as few people get the opportunity to live it. Being Ann Landers' husband could pose a terrible problem but Jules has met the challenge with dignity and incredible good humor. My husband is my best friend, and I am his. I consider it a priviege to be the wife of this beautiful guy who took on the world with a ninth grade education and a hole in his sock.

Bodyware To Become Bundlesome, Maybe?

NEW YORK (AP) — Come September, ladies may have to admit that getting dressed for a party is like girding for battle.

And they may toss out their delicate velvet jewelry chests for clunky metal trunks.

The reason is "bodyware"—a curious combination of Arthurian armor and delicate costume jewelry which is meant to be worn over—or under—fashion's nude, transparent, or just plain opaque looks.

Bodyware includes vests of chain or colored stones, belts that dangle at least six inches below the hips, bracelets that cuff the wrists, pearl-studded breastplates and bib-necklaces.

Designer Kenneth Jay Lane admitted that a woman "has to be beautiful" to wear the styles which might pinch a flabby back or midriff.

He made his comments after a minishowing this week of several pounds of his baubles piled upon one beautiful woman and one careful man.

Steven Brody, one of the designers of the Cadoro costume jewelry collection, suggested that the new hardware is "accessories, not jewelry."

He said the real beauty of his firm's body shields and sleeve jewelry—chains and stones to replace, or wear on top of, long sleeves—was to update an old dress.

"You can put one of these on and change the look of yesterday's little black dress," he said.

With ropes of pearls staging their biggest comeback since the '30s many jewelry designers have decorated bodyware with individual pearls as big as marbles.

Stanley Conheim, of Sharon Manufacturing, showed a version of a jewelry skirt at the annual Swarovski Jewelry Awards. It was a belt of rhinestones, with rhinestone tassels that hung like a grass skirt from the waist.

And just in case the new armor does not do the trick, Cadoro has updated the cane into a jeweled walking stick—with good-luck amulets and a sturdy tip for swatting at offenders.

MOBILE PULPIT

SUTTON-IN-ASHFIELD, England (AP) — A local churchman, Arthur Quincey, has built a mobile pulpit and is offering the design to any clergymen who have difficulty in bridging the gap between themselves and small congregations in large churches where pulpits are a long way from the pews. It cost less than 15 dollars and can be made in under 10 hours, Quincey says. The mobile pulpit just hooks on to the pews that are nearest to the congregation.

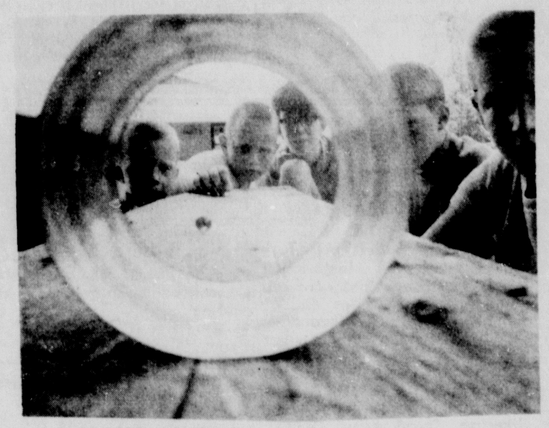
Bertrand Boy Joins Battle Against Muscular Dystrophy



GREG D. LASTER, 10, Bertrand, rolls the marble down the shoot, aiming for the tin can at the end of the bench. Greg is playing one of the many games at Kevin Collier's carnival which was held to raise money for the fight against muscular dystrophy.

Kevin Collier, 12, Bertrand, has joined the campaign against muscular distrophy. Kevin hosted a carnival Monday, in his parents' yard, to help raise funds for this campaign.

The Muscular Dystrophy Carnival Kit, ordered from WPSD-TV, Paducah, Ky., has been brought to the public by that station's "Popeye Show." The show is presented each week-day afternoon.

Kevin's carnival opened for business at 1 p.m. Monday, with 11 children waiting for the festivities to begin. The games, refreshments, decorations and music were all from suggestions in the kit.

The refreshment stand offered choices of drink, banked goods, and bubble gum. Punch, five cents a glass, two cents for a cookie, five cents for a brownie, and bubble gum sold for two cents a piece.

In the game department, Kevin offered bowling green, milk bottle drop, sponge toss, marble shoot and pie toss. Each game cost two cents to play, and the winner was allowed a second turn free.

Kevin is one of 672 children who ordered the "carnival kit," and all these children are competing to see who can earn the most money for the campaign. The winner will receive a prize Saturday from WPST-TV studios, when a party will be held in honor of the contestants.

When the festivities are over, and everyone has forgotten about the carnival campaign, the charitable work of the funds raised will go on.

And Kevin Collier will remember when he sees a poster for the fight against muscular dystrophy, that he helped to fight a disease which can cripple people his own age.

EVEN KEVIN Collier's sister, Jennifer, 3, had to pay for a glass of punch at the carnival held to raise money to fight muscular dystrophy.

It Is Unusual

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) - Most brides walk down the aisle. Mrs. Robert Rockey rolled down it.

"We met on roller skates," said the new bride. "Skating is our favorite sport, so we decided to be married on skates."

That's how the former Edith Frable explained her wedding Monday evening in the middle of the Hecla Park Skating Rink.

The bride-wearing a pink lace wedding gown, white veil and shoe skates trimmed in pink - skated to the middle of the rink on her brother's arm.

Awaiting her was her husband - to - be, the best man and maid of honor, all balanced nervously.

When their vows had been said and rings exchanged, the couple skated to the rear of the rink where they headed a receiving line.

The words chicory, hyssop, myrrh and saffron all were borrowed from Sumerian, an ancient language.

Victory For Cards

ST. LOUIS (AP) - The St. Louis Cardinals won their customary payday victory plus one Tuesday night, sweeping a doubleheader with the New York Mets, 4-1 and 8-5.

It was the 22nd consecutive payday victory for the Redbirds, but it was the first time they had to win two games to keep the checkday record clear. The Redbirds are paid on the 1st and 15th.

Steve Carlton upped his record to 9-5 with a three-hitter in the first half of the twi-night doubleheader. He lowered his earned run average to 1.78 by holding the Mets hitless in all but the third inning and fanning nine batters.

Joe Torrez, now 2-4, picked up his first victory as a starter. He gave up a walk, three singles and three runs in the first inning of the nightcap, but settled down and pitched well until the eighth, when threy straight singles knocked him out. The Mets scored one run off Torrez and one off reliever Joe Hoerner.

Cardinal shortstop Steve Huntz, who also took a turn at second base Tuesday night, had one RBI in 50 times at bat before game time.

He hit a double in the opener and drove in a run and his bases - loaded double in the second contest scored three more. He was one for three in the first game and one for two in the nightcap.

The 23-year-old Cleveland, Ohio, product, who played with Tulsa last year, wasn't overly impressed with his own performance.

"It's only one night, I might have more to say about my hitting if I put a few nights like this together," Huntz remarked.

He did allow it felt good to be cheered when he came to bat again after his bases - loaded double.

"Generally all I've heard was boos, if I've heard anything up till now," he said.

Nolan Ryan 3-1 was charged with the opening loss and Joe Dilauro 0-3 was the nightcap loser.

The teams meet again tonight.

Babe Ruth Change

Inadequate facilities have forced the Senior Babe Ruth League play to move its games from Dancer Field to the VFW stadium.

In order to do this, the games have had to be rescheduled so they do not overlap with other games being played at the stadium.

Women Golf Notes

This is the midway point of Sikeston women's golf season. Players are braving the heat to have enough scores to be eligible for the Buckner Ragsdale trophy. Each player must have fifteen scores of eighteen holes each before July 1, and a like number before October 1.

Many of the golfers are slowly cutting down their handicaps, and as a result some fine scores have been recorded. Mary Bain has scored a 36 for nine holes and a 78 for eighteen. Alberta Cox scored a 39 and a 78 for eighteen. Betty Dawson also has a 39 - 78 to her credit.

Phyllis Joyner has scored one 39 and June Watson a 38.

Tuesday's prizes were awarded to the players who came closest to the flagstick on hole number 6. Winnings were Phyllis Joyner, Doris Stepp, Evelyn Campbell and Jeanette Latham.

Betty Dawson was this week's hostess.

Little Leaguers

No less than 11 runs separated teams in Little League games last night with Rotary posting the biggest margin as it downed the Bank of Sikeston 37-5.

Collins started the Musial action off on the right foot as it defeated the Daily Standard 23-1. Twenty players combined to post the win as Launius led the way as he pitched a no-hitter.

Rotary took its win in three innings of play as it accumulated 12 runs in the first, 10 in the second, and 15 in the third. Vaught took the win for Rotary as he hurled a one-hitter against the Bank of Sikeston.

Caproco opened the American division play with a 14-3 win over Fabick. Taylor received the win for Caproco as Gater was endowed with the loss.

Police also won by a 14-3 margin as it got back into the winner's circle by downing First National. Thompson led the way for the squad as he pitched a no-hitter, scored three runs, and collected three hits for three trips to the plate.

Five Area Golfers Win At Jackson

Five area golfers placed in the Kimberland Invitational Golf tournament at Jackson Sunday afternoon as C. W. Knauts successfully defended his title with a seven - under - par 137 in the 36-hole competition.

Area golfers coming out well in the play were Dr. Milton Kobler, Charleston, Jim Bush, Sikeston, David Agey, Dexter, King Sidwell, Sikeston, and Jim Godsey of Sikeston.

Knauts, Piggott, Ark., was four strokes under his nearest opponents, Robert McBride, Cape Girardeau and Buddy Godwin, Poplar Bluff, who tied for the runner-up position with 141's.

Mike David, Bonne Terre, was fourth in the final standings with 142.

Connie Connell, Mounds, Ill. who usually follows the southeast Missouri golf circuit had to pass up the weekend activity to play at Fulton, Ky., where he was defending champion.

More than 170 entries were in the field for the Saturday-Sunday action at Jackson, competing for prizes in five classes.

Herman Stiles, Poplar Bluff, won the "A" class with a 145, with Jack Litz of Jackson second at 149. Ray Miller of Mounds was the "B" winner with 150, with Sikeston's Jim Busch in the runner-up spot at 156.

Berb Holshouser, Cape Girardeau, fired 159 to claim Class "C" honors and Bill Busby, St. Louis, was the Class "D" a titalist with 165.

Danforth Gives Three C's for Fighting Crime

WEST PLAINS, Mo. (AP)—Proposals for the anti - crime effort in Missouri were embodied in "three C's"—coordination, clarification and cash—outlined Tuesday night by John Danforth, state attorney general.

Danforth, indicating his dissatisfaction with the accomplishments of the 1969 Missouri Legislature, said it would be possible to call a special session of the lawmakers on the subject of law enforcement alone.

The Republican attorney general spoke to the Greater West Plains Chamber of Commerce. He said, "There is a wave of fear that towers over a wave of crime. This fear creates hostility—old against young, black against white and rural areas against big cities."

He outlined his "three C's" in this fashion:

—Coordination—Proposal for a Missouri Bureau of Investigation "to provide a central group of well-trained agents, and to provide a real strike force." He would also like to see "regional" jails with regular jail inspections.

—Clarification—To assure that the citizen and the peace officers understand law. Danforth called for clear guidelines for peace officers, and expanded mandatory training.

—Cash—To provide adequate salaries for qualified peace officers. "If we're not willing to pay for crime control," he said, "let's not complain."

Vanlandingham Says Legislature Exhibited More Responsibility

JEFFERSON CITY (AP)—The 1969 Missouri Legislature exhibited more responsibility toward its constituents than any he has been associated with for some time, the leader of the Democratic majority says.

Sen. A. J. Basey Vanlandingham, D—Columbia, told a radio interviewer after the legislative session adjourned early Tuesday his mail indicated Missourians did not want their state income taxes increased.

That issue, one of a package of revenue bills recommended by Gov. Warren E. Hearnes, failed. Vanlandingham said there will be enough money on hand to get the state through the next fiscal year.

He expressed doubt that Hearnes would call a special session this summer. Vanlandingham said there is the possibility of an emergency

States Run Into Budget Problems

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

California prisons and mental hospitals were buying perishable food on credit today as the legislative logjam over the state budget showed no signs of breaking.

The Ohio Legislature approved an appropriations bill Tuesday night after a 36-hour quarrel that left the state temporarily without spending money. In Pennsylvania, appropriations for July were approved in place of an annual budget.

California's 33 penal institutions and 14 mental hospitals, which buy perishable foods such as eggs, milk and meat every day or two, will have to rely on local merchants' trust, according to Caspar Weinberger, state director of finance.

"They will not be able to get food unless they can persuade some supplier to give it in good faith," he said.

Other state officials said they had no funds to buy postage stamps or office supplies.

Democrat Ronald Reagan's $6.27 billion budget was stalled when Democrats refused to vote for the bill unless Reagan increased school aid. The Republican governor offered a $102 million increase in the $1.3 billion school budget, but Democrats weren't satisfied.

A two-thirds majority of 54 is needed in the 80-seat Assembly, where the GOP holds a 41-39 edge.

"I haven't seen any indication that the Democrats intend to move from their position," Republican Assembly Speaker Robert T. Monagan said.

Ohio Gov. James A. Rhodes is expected to sign a $4.17 billion appropriations bill today after losing his fight to retain control of the State Controlling Board, which spends the money.

Both legislative houses approved the bill Tuesday night. John McHugh, the governor's top aide, said, "We have no objections to it."

The bill changed the makeup of the Controlling Board to the state finance director and six legislators, at least two from the minority party. It originally contained the finance director, attorney general, state auditor and two legislators from the majority party.

Rhodes and the leadership of both houses are Republicans.

"We take a lot of guff for raising money," said Sen. William W. Taft of Cleveland. "So we ought to have the power over how it is spent."

The Pennsylvania Legislature approved stopgap funds for government operations and welfare during July after failing to pass Gov. Raymond Shafer's $2.25 billion budget. Shafer had called for a state income tax to finance the budget and legislators balked.

St. Louis Gets Order to Remap Alderman Wards

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A federal judge declared aldermanic apportionment based on voter registration statistics unconstitutional Monday and ordered St. Louis to remap itself along one man, one vote lines.

"It cannot be seriously contended that elected officials represent only registered voters," U. S. Dist. Judge James H. Meredith said. "The right to equal representation does not depend upon the extent of a person's political activity or his exercise of political rights."

Meredith ordered the city to present a plan for reapportionment based on population within 20 days. He also barred the city from holding aldermanic elections until such a plan is approved and instituted. The city's next scheduled aldermanic elections are in 1971, when voters in 14 of St. Louis' 28 wards select representatives.

The judge said 1968 registration statistics indicated the number of voters in wards varied from 7,382 to 11,603. Population differences were more pronounced, with ward population varying from 25,947 to 47,071 based on 1960 census figures.

"These statistics for the City of St. Louis show very clearly that the wards do not comply with the minimal constitutional requirements of equal representation," Meredith said. "No justification is possible for variances of such magnitude."

Mayor A. J. Cervantes termed the decision "a complicated subject." He said the city would issue a statement after officials conferred on the matter.

Meredith ruled on a suit filed by attorney Paul Preisler and five other St. Louis residents. Preisler recently won a court battle to force reapportionment of Congressional districts in Missouri.

Fifty-two Students In Matthews Headstart

MATTHEWS - Fifty-two students are enrolled in the Head Start Program at Matthews R-V School being directed by Louanna Sutton. Other teachers are Cathy Porter and Mattie Speed. Teacher-aides are Barbara Wheetley, Linda Ward, Nancy Trail, Detsil Belvin, Marilyn Rudisill, and Rose Davis. Social Service director is Barbara Nimmo. Shirley Powell is the nurse and Rachel Clark is the secretary.

Mr. and Mrs. James Stobaugh were home for a three-day visit with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. "Red" Kirby at Sikeston and Mr. and Mrs. Olen Stobaugh. Upon his return to the Keefer Air Force Base at Biloxi, Miss. James is to begin a 12-week course in administration personell in the Technical School.

Carol Gene Waite, St. Louis, is visiting this week with Mr. and Mrs. Webb Sibley.

Mr. and Mrs. Cleatus Curtis, Aurora, Ill., visited here this week with his father, A. R. Curtis, and family.

Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Conrad of Bowling Green, Mr. and Mrs. William Kirton of Newton, Kans.; and Miss Georgia Conrad of Arlington, Va., visited Wednesday with Mr. and Mrs. B. B. Conrad. Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Stone of Belleville, Ill. visited during the weekend with the Conrads and Mrs. L. D. Waters.

The Matthews Community Club met Wednesday evening, June 25, at the home of Mrs. Tom Moore. Mrs. C. O. Hawkins, co-hostess, was in charge of the program on "Home Beautification". A film, "Bulldozed America" was shown through the courtesy of the New Madrid County Library.

Routine reports were made during the business session and plans were made for the annual July dinner meeting to be held at Two-Toni's an Sunday evening, July 27 at 6 o'clock when members will bring guests.

Refreshments were served by the hostesses during the social hour.

Mrs. Nelson Lumsden and daughter, Ruth Ann, and Mrs. C. O. Hawkins attended the wedding of Miss Brenda Silverthorn and Frank Bollinger at the Baptist Church at Oran Sunday afternoon.

Nelson Lumsden attended a board meeting of Dist. 10 Christian churches at Farmington Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Franks and her granddaughters, Neila and Jana Sims of Sikeston, enjoyed an outing Sunday at Reelfoot Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Brown and children of St. Louis accompanied home their neice, Tina Atwill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Atwill, who had visited a week in their home. Other recent guests in the Atwill home were Mr. and Mrs. Larry Stephens, Springfield. Ronnie Atwill accompanied them to Springfield where he is employed this summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Herschel Yates have returned from visits with their sons, Marshall Yates in Washington, D. C. and Dr. and Mrs. Wilson Yates and family in St. Paul, Minn. While in Minnesota Mrs. Yates had a medical check-up at Mayo Brothers Hospital in Rochester.

Miss Deene Ann Whitten, bride-elect of Michael Ford, Affton, was complimented with a lingerie shower given Monday evening, June 16, in the Christian Church fellowship hall. Mrs. Michael Bird and Mrs. Terry Walker were hostesses.

The gift and serving tables at opposite ends of the room were covered with green lace-edged cloths overlaid with white net caught up in swags with bells and lilies of the valley. A white wedding bell was suspended over the gift table which was centered with an arrangement of white daisies. A green and white floral arrangement centered the refreshment table from which silver compotes filled with mints and nuts, cup cakes, cookies and punch were served.

Those attending were Mrs. Harvey Kelso, Mrs. Charles Hawkins, Mrs. Danny Joe Whitten, Mrs. John Lyman Whitten, Mrs. Johnny Wilson, Miss Louanna Sutton, Miss Donna Jo Reid, Mrs. Bird, and Mrs. Walker.

Split Over Tactics Teachers In DEA Quit National Unit

By WILLIAM GRANT
Free Press Education Writer

The 1,400-member Detroit Education Association (DEA) has voted to disaffiliate from the million-member National Education Association (NEA).

DEA President Robert Johnson said the vote came because DEA members disapproved of the stand by the Michigan Education Association (MEA) in favor of agency-shop clauses in teacher contracts. The MEA is the state branch of the NEA.

The clause requires teachers either to join the collective-bargaining unit or pay a service fee equal to the dues. The MEA has more than 50 local associations which have agency-shop clauses in their contracts.

"We don't feel professional educators should be forced to join such an organization," Johnson said. "They should have freedom of choice."

The split between the Detroit association and the MEA has been brewing since 1966, when the two groups became embroiled in a controversy over dues collection.

Under the old policy, the DEA collected membership dues and paid the state and national organizations a share. But the MEA insisted it was not inreceiving its share of the dues and forced the DEA to agree to an arrangement whereby the state group would collect the dues and make payments to the local organization.

LAST FALL, the DEA tried to back out of that arrangement and was sued by the MEA.

At the same time, Johnson had launched a DEA drive to force an election among Detroit teachers in hopes of unseating the powerful Detroit Federation of Teachers (DFT) as bargaining agent for the city's 12,000 teachers.

MEA officials called the effort to unseat the DFT "futile" and refused to support it. The DEA fell well short of getting the needed 30 per cent of Detroit's teachers to force an election.

MEA officials Wednesday said a meeting between the MEA executive board and Johnson had been set for Saturday, but that now it probably never would be held.

NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE
Whereas, C. E. Brashear and Sherma Brashear, his wife, by their Deed of Trust, dated the 17th day of July, 1964, and recorded in the Recorder's Office for Scott County, Missouri, in Deed of Trust Book 142 at page 351, conveyed to Douglas W. Dodds, Trustee, the following described property, situated in the County of Scott, State of Missouri, to-wit:
All of Lots Numbered Five (5) and Six (6) in Block "B" of Smiths Addition to the City of Oran, Scott County, Missouri, which conveyance was made to said Douglas W. Dodds, Trustee, in Trust, to secure the payment of a certain note in said Deed of Trust described; and
Whereas, it is provided in and by the terms of said Deed of Trust, that if the holder of said Note shall desire a sale, and in case of the absence, death, refusal to act, or disability in any wise of the above- named Trustee, the then Sheriff of Scott County, State of Missouri, shall act in lieu of and perform the duties and powers delegated to the above - named Trustee in and by the terms of said Deed of Trust; and
Whereas, Douglas W. Dodds, the above- named Trustee, has refused to act; and
Whereas, default was made and still continues in the payment of said note.
Now Therefore, at the request of the legal holder of said note, I, John Dennis, Sheriff of Scott County, State of Missouri, acting as successor Trustee in accordance with the terms of said Deed of Trust, and in the place and stead of the above-named Trustee appointed in and by said Deed of Trust, will sell the property above described at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, at the East front door of the Scott County Court House in the City of Benton, Scott County, Missouri, on Thursday, July 24, 1969, between the hours of nine o'clock a.m. and five o'clock p.m., for the purpose of satisfying said indebtedness and the cost of executing this trust.

If You Were the Judge

Property Has to be Physically Damaged To Collect Damages

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Placid Peter was so sensitive to noise that an ant walking around in his cookie jar could keep him awake all night. Consequently, picture his consternation when he woke up one morning and found a new highway, with noisy cars speeding to and fro, right under his nose. Actually, the state had condemned a large portion of his land for highway purposes and had paid him for doing so. But when the highway was completed, he never figured it would be only 50 feet from his front door. But there it was.

Being a practical fellow and realizing he couldn't remove the highway, he hurried off to court and did the next best thing. He demanded additional payment for the damage to his property due to the increased noise.

"While I got paid for the land that was taken," he conceded, "I didn't get paid for the damage to the land I kept. And certainly all that noise at my front door reduces the value of my property. The noise is enough to make a clam clamor."

"A person can only get paid for damage to property," was the answer, "when the property is some way damaged. Obviously, sound waves cannot damage property."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you require the state to pay Peter for the increased noise?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that generally, a person cannot collect for damages to his property in the absence of some definite physical injury; that payment is not required because something affects his senses.

(Based upon a 1969 Utah Supreme Court Decision)

Former Essex Man Named Refuge Manager

ESSEX — Thomas W. Martin has been named Refuge Manager of the Piedmont National Wildlife Refuge at Round Oak, Georgia, according to recent announcement by C. Edward Carlson, Regional Director of the Southeastern Region for the Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife.

Martin succeeds William H. Julian, Jr., who recently transferred to Blackwater National Wildlife Refuge, Cambridge, Maryland as Refuge Manager.

A veteran of 14 years service with the Bureau, Martin started his Federal career as a Fishery Research Biologist at Woods Hole, Massachusetts. Later he transferred to Wichita Mountains National Wildlife Refuge, Cache, Oklahoma as Assistant Refuge Manager. In 1958 he came to the Southeast as Assistant Refuge Manager of Sabine National Wildlife Refuge, Sulphur, Louisiana, and a short while was promoted to Refuge Managerof Chincoteague National Wildlife Refuge, Chincoteague, Virginia, where he remained for four years. The past seven years he has been Refuge Manager of Santee National Wildlife Refuge, Summerton, South Carolina.

In 1964, Martin was given a Special Art or Service Award for his efforts and participation in carrying out the accelerated Public Works Program.

A native of Essex, Missouri, Martin has a B.S. degree in agriculture from the University of Missouri. He served three years in the Air Force.

As administrator of the Piedmont Refuge, Martin will develop the Refuge for migratory waterfowl and resident birds and mammals. He will be responsible for forest management and improved wildlife habitat, recreation, and economis uses of the area including surplus refuge products. This 33,248- acre area is predominatly pine- hardwood forest.

Martin, with his wife and two children, will live at the refuge.

The University of Washington football team will play Michigan State at East Lansing, Mich., on Sept. 20 and then face Michigan in Ann Arbor, Mich., on Sept. 27. The team will stay in the state until heading home.

Today In U.S. History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Wednesday, July 2, the 183rd day of 1969. There are 182 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1881, President James Garfield was shot by a disappointed office seeker as he walked through the Washington railroad station. Garfield died Sept. 19.

On this date:

In 1776, the Continental Congress in Philadelphia passed a resolution declaring that the American Colonies were free and independent states.

In 1862, President Abraham Lincoln signed the Morrill Act establishing land-grant colleges.

In 1890, the Sherman AntiTrust Act was passed.

In 1912, a Democratic National Convention in Baltimore nominated Woodrow Wilson for president.

In 1937, the American woman flier, Amelia Earhart, and her co-pilot, Frederick J. Noonan, vanished while on a flight over the Pacific.

In 1940, during World War II, the French government moved to Vichy.

Ten years ago: Pope John XXIII issued his first encyclical, urging world unity and peace.

Five years ago: President Lyndon B. Johnson signed a broad civil rights act.

One year ago: A judge in Britain approved a U.S. request for extradition of James Earl Ray to stand trial for the killing of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

New York City was called "Gotham" by Washington Irving and "Bagdad-on-the-Subway" by O. Henry.

New Contract May Make Johnny Carson TV's Highest Paid

NEW YORK (AP) -- Johnny Carson has signed a multiple-year contract with the National Broadcasting Co. that reportedly makes him the highest paid entertainer in television history.

Industry sources guessed that Carson, host of the "Tonight" show, might be earning up to $85,000 a week over a two- or three-year period. He reportedly receives $1 millions a year under his old contract.

Don Durgin, president of NBC-TV, said Tuesday that Carson got "a good increase and one that I think he richly deserved." He declined to disclose terms of the contract.

DURBAN, South Africa (AP) Antique snuff boxes worth more than Rands 40,000 ($56,000) disappeared when a thief broke into Mrs. L. Whitman's suburban Pinetown home. Some of the 68 snuff boxes in the collection were more than 500 years old.

Despite Laws, Fireworks Still July 4 Injury Threat

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The automobile has made the Fourth of July holiday an occasion for going places rather then staying home and shooting fireworks.

This factor and the enactment of a variety of laws have come close to eliminating fireworks deaths during Independence Day celebrations. But the crack of fireworks explosions is still heard throughout the land and Americans continue to be injured, sometimes severely.

In 1903, the American Medical Association listed 466 fireworks fatalities.

In recent years, Associated Press compilations have noted one or two or even no deaths.

But bootleggers of pyrotechnics continue to peddle their wares.

A spokesman for the National Fire Protection Association said: "We believe injuries run about 5,000 in the July 4 period."

The association has written a model statute, which permits the use of cap pistols and canes with caps on the end and allows authorized public displays of fireworks.

Eighteen states, with 46 per cent of the nation's population have adopted this model law or similar legislation. They are Arizona, Connecticut, Delaware, Georgia, Illinois, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Minnesota, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Vermont and West Virginia.

Eight states—Alabama, Florida, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan, Oregon, Utah, and Wisconsin— have modified versions of the model law, but they also allow sparklers. They contain 17 per cent of the population.

Nine states and the District of Columbia allow what are known as Class C fireworks. These are less powerful than some of the heavy noise- and fire-makers and include sparklers, small firecrackers and Roman candles. These states — Colorado, Idaho, Kentucky, Montana, North Dakota, South Carolina, Texas, Virginia and Wyoming—contain 13 per cent of the population.

Five states—California, Kansas, Nebraska, New Mexico and Washington, holding 13 per cent of the population—allow local enforcing authorities to decide which of the Class C fireworks can be sold.

Eight states, with 10 per cent of the nation's population, permit all Class C fireworks. They are Louisiana, Mississippi, Missouri, Oklahoma, South Dakota, Tennessee, Alaska and Arkansas.

Two states, Nevada and Hawaii, have virtually no state regulation.

"The law, and enforcement of the law, while usually at the local level, is quite spotty," said the NFPA spokesman.

"Bootlegging seems to be on the increase. The problem is commercial bootlegging and bootlegging by persons for their own use."

The bootleggers bring the fireworks from a state with liberal controls to a state with strict laws.

Michigan permits only the least dangerous fireworks. But there is heavy traffic in illegal fireworks from Canada, especially through Detroit.

Mexico also is a source of supply.

Every year around July 4 state or local police in Massachusetts arrest a storekeeper or two for selling imported fireworks from under the counter.

Tennessee law leaves the choice to municipalities and counties, which generally bar all but sparklers. Fireworks are available, however, at roadside stands.

Maryland permits the manufacture of fireworks, but bans possession or sale except for public displays. There has been much feeling that such manufacture should be outlawed because of recent explosions at plants which produce fireworks.

Georgia's law was changed this year to permit manufacturing in the state—but the fireworks must be sold outside the state.

The law in Arizona, one of the strict control states, permits the sale of fireworks to persons outside the state.

Across the country, statutes and punishment show a wide variation. Fines for violators range from $25 to $1,000, and jail terms from 20 days to a year.

Nevada gives the state fire marshal power to make regulations for the control of fireworks, but holders of that office haven't done so. Washoe County (Reno) has barred rockets, Roman candles and other fireworks. Clark County (Las Vegas) allows only small fountains and pinwheels which do not explode. Most of the other 15 counties have no regulations.

Hawaii's ground rules: no aerial fireworks and homemade crackers. No fireworks can be set off on streets, sidewalks or beaches.

There can be variety within states. Kansas limits sales to crackers no more than 1.5 inches long, Roman candles, railroad fuses and truck flares and sparklers. But most of the larger cities in Kansas have ordinances against the sale of anything except caps. South Dakota has restrictions on size but many communities don't allow fireworks to be shot off within the city limits.

Congress adopted the Child Protection Act in 1966. Under its provisions, the Food and Drug Administration has banned such powerful firewoks—cherry bombs and giant salutes—except for agricultural uses, such as scaring off crows, and military purposes.

Hearnes Rates Legislative Session Not a Total Loss

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Almost everyone agreed it was a lousy, negative session but there the unanimity ended.

Gov. Warren E. Hearnes, in a post-midnight news conference, said his greatest disappointment was that the personality clashes reduced the legislature's production record.

But he found some solace in the enactment of a Congressional Redistricting bill—to answer the third Federal Court rejection of Missouri laws in this regard—and a proposed constitutional change to permit use of highway funds for toll roads.

The last was his pet. It was the first thing he asked for last January in his message to the legislature.

As it goes on the ballot, either at the general election in November 1970 or at a special election sooner, it would permit use of highway user tax money for toll roads. Hearnes asked for it after the State Supreme Court said a year ago his old toll road law was unconstitutional.

Not to be outdone, Sen. Earl R. Blackwell, D-Hillsboro, Senate president pro tem, had his own news conference only minutes after the governor had finished.

Blackwell said "the governor has got to be completely out of his head" to say the state was $19 million short of meeting its obligations in the coming year.

Hearnes was restrained during his news conference, Blackwell angry. His voice rose at times and he challenged Hearnes to try to get him defeated in his district.

The Late, Late Show—a news conference for House minority leader R. J. (Bus) King, found the Clayton Republican saying that on the final night the House leadership acted with "complete stupidity."

King said there "must be a special session if the governor has the guts to call it. Or next year he's going to have to say what he wants."

King referred to the Hearnes message last January when he said if he were a legislator he would favor an income tax increase. It was only after legislative criticism that the governor said flatly he wanted an increase in corporate and individual income taxes—a desire that was lost in the final windup confusion.

So, 90 minutes after the session fell apart, it looked like this:

The governor blamed the personality clash with Blackwell— a clash he said he had not sought.

Blackwell blamed the governor for controlling the House and attempting to wield the same control over the Senate.

King blamed the Democrats. He said "while this political struggle went raging for endless weeks and months the people's business was summarily ignored."

Hearnes said he would consider the problem before deciding whether to call a special session.

Blackwell said "to call a special session now would be stupid."

King said he thought the governor would have to call a special session to meet the needs of such services as welfare.

Rep. Thomas A. Walsh, D-St. Louis, called it the worst session he's attended. He has been a member of the house since 1945 and generally supports Hearnes.

The governor said this kind of session could hurt the Democratic party and no one argued.

California Without Budget

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — California began a new fiscal year without a budget today and Gov. Ronald Reagan flatly refused to accept an emergency bill to keep the state running for 30 days.

As a result, the nation's most populous state was plunged into unprecedented fiscal chaos. Salaries for state employes were cut off and Reagan asked them to work for free. State off cials no longer had authority to pay wages or bills.

The Republican governor, at a 2 a.m. news conference, blamed Assembly Democrats led by Assemblyman Jesse M. Unruh, a Reagan political rival.

"Blocking the budget for the state is the most irresponsible single act in the history of California state government," said Reagan.

Development Council Has Regular Monthly Meeting

MALDEN--The Bootheel Economic Development Council and Bootheel Regional Planning Commission held a joint meeting with Pat Lee, chairman, presiding.

A full reports on various projects were made after the minutes of the previous meeting had been read and seconded.

Ted Hull reported on the progress of the vegetables on which he was doing research. He said that a Field Day was being planned for July 9 so that area farmers and food processors could see the results of the different kinds of vegetables being grown.

L.R. Bain gave the treasurer's report for the Bootheel Regional Planning Commission. He reported a balance of $19,621.12. Mr. Bain said that Blodgett, Advance, and Dudley were the only towns that have not paid their 1968 assessments.

Motion was made by L.F. Wheeler and seconded by L.R. Bain to transfer $4,000,00 from the Planning Commission to the Council in order to comply with the Federal matching funds. Motion carried.

R.J. Dirks gave no treasurer's report this month for the Counil due to an attempt to get the treasurer's report to coincide with the Council's month ending on the 15th. There was a list of all expenditures from May 16 to June 15 passed out for the boards approval. Motion was made by Randall Ramsey and seconded by L.F. Wheeler to approve expenditures for May 16 to June 15. Motion carried.

Sewer Plan Readied

Bud Waters, consulting engineer for the Four-County Sewer and Water Plan, reported that he had contacted approximately 80% of the towns, discussing with mayors and city leaders the town's plans. Mr. Waters stated he probably would have Part I completed shortly. After July 15, he would be ready to meet with the water and sewer steering committee.

Philip Shelton and Bob Pulliam then reported on the present status of the Law Council, Health Care Program, various city's projects, the higher education needs program, and all E.D.A. projects are pending in the Duluth office and Washington, D.C.

J.B. Martin reported that E.D.A. set up the Budget Categories for the quarterly financial report. Janitorial Services included in Utilities and no budget item for C.P.A. fees. He recommended that $500.00 be transferred from Per Diem and $500.00 from Personnel Burden. The Miscellaneous item to be increased from $1,500.00 to $2,100.00 - the additional $600.00 for C.P.A. cost. The Utilities and Janitor item to be increased $400.00 - $1,000.00 for Utilities and $400.00 for Janitorial Services. The total budget of $78,800.00 would remain the same. Motion was made by L.F. Wheeler and seconded by J.T. Holder to approve the transfer of these funds and the operating budget as presented. Motion carried.

J. B. Martin stated that the $25,000 surety bond would cover both signatures of the Commission and the Council without additional cost. He also stated that resolutions have been sent to the Bank of Hayti and First National Bank of Malden.

Lea reported on his trip to Kansas City to a multi-agency meeting involving O.E.O., S.B.A., and two other agencies. He said it involved the new thrust toward "Black Capitalism". He stated the meeting was disappointing. Mr. Lea then read the list of the new members who will be approved and notified by the Department of Community Affairs. He told the board that original plans called for the election of Bootheel Economic Development Council officers at tonight's meeting, but due to failure of notification of board members, the election will be held at next month's meeting.

Lea said that two television stations have contacted him regarding a program for them. He thanked Mr. Stapleton for the excellent promotional coverage that he had extended to the Bootheel Council.

Hurshel Crass reported that H.U.D. (Housing and Urban Development) has awarded the Department of Community Affairs $425,000 to do state planning. Mr. Godsey, State Planner, stated that due to the small amount of funds available, a priority rating system was developed and the Bootheel was in the first ten regions to be considered for funding. Mr. Godsey said there are three methods which may be used.

1. Department of Community Affairs can hire planner for the region.
2. The Region can do own employing of planner.
3. Planning may be done by a private consultant.

Godsey stated that most regions had preferred to employ their own planner. J.B. Martin stated that some members from the Council may want to attend a meeting with some HUD officials on June 25 and 26 before they commit themselves about which route they may choose. Pat Lea requested some of the Council members go to the meeting in Jefferson City June 25 and 26 to gather more information in regard to regional planning. Mr. Lea told Mr. Crass and Mr. Godsey that a decision would be reached at the next board meeting of the Regional Planning Commission.

Crass read a resolution requesting state financial aid to the Regional Planning Commissions which has been adopted by eleven other regional commissions. Motion was made by L.F. Wheeler and seconded by John Brannock that Pat Lea sign the resolution. Motion was carried.

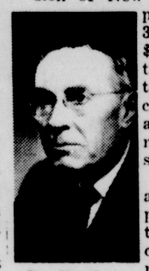
Handouts Destroy Character

THE City Planning Commission of New York has approved a 300,000 - word, $19-billion plan that is expected to change the city's skyline and alter its economic and social structure.



Dr. Kershner

The $5 billion a year that this plan is expected to cost must come, so the planners say, from the Federal government.

The main purpose of the plan is to create a new middle class by giving three million poor people "direct payments, new public service jobs, subsidy of expanded jobs in the private sector and stipends during advanced training."

Giving money to poor people has never yet produced middle class people. It is more likely to reduce the present middle class to the poor class.

People achieve middle class standing by character, integrity, initiative and hard work. To greatly increase the burden on them in this attempt to buy a new middle class will reduce them to the poverty level.

What we need is more earned money and less free welfare. If able-bodied citizens were required to do useful work in return for relief payments, we would be on the road to a solution of the problem. Giving people more money without obligating them to do useful work for it, is destructive of character and will cause a rapid increase in the number of people needing and demanding relief. It is the road to bankruptcy and loss of freedom.

Many of our poor people are not able to earn standard wages, but they could earn something. If employers were not required to pay minimum wages to people incapable of earning them, many unemployed people would find jobs. There ought also to be an apprentice wage for younger persons until they acquire the skill and experience that would enable them to earn standard wages.

The destruction of freedom in the marketplace is responsible for the insoluble problem of welfare and the demand for more and more relief.

When government takes money from some and gives it to others, it is violating the Commandments against coveting and stealing. No nation will long retain its freedom if it continually expands that process.

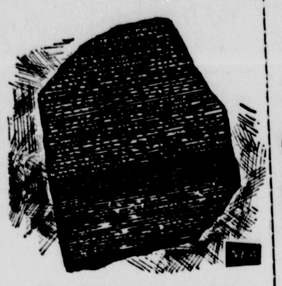
The world's largest telescope is located on Mt. Palomar, Calif. It has a 200-inch reflector. A telescope reflector is a concave mirror, usually made of Pyrex and coated with either silver or aluminum. According to The World Almanac, light rays hit the reflector and are then directed to the upper end of the telescope where they are magnified and observed through an eye-piece.



The Rosetta Stone, found in 1799 by one of Napoleon's soldiers during the ill-fated French invasion of Egypt, was used as the key to understanding hieroglyphics—ancient Egyptian picture writing. The World Almanac notes that the black basalt tablet was inscribed with the same text in three languages—hieroglyphic, demotic and Greek.

Automatic parking meters began sprouting on the sidewalks of America on July 16, 1935, when Oklahoma City recognized the genius of inventor Carlton Magee and purchased a number of his Park-O-Meters, The World Almanac says. Today, untold millions of coins later, the ubiquitous parking meter rations time and curb space from coast to coast, with 60,000 in New York City alone.

Famous Kansas City Landmark 100 Years Old

KANSAS CITY — A famous landmark which assured that Kansas City would flourish as a metropolis will soon be 100 years old.

On Wednesday, a ceremony will mark the centennial of the Hannibal Bridge, the first major structure to span the Missouri, and the river's first permanent rail crossing.

Back in the 1850's Kansas Citians put up uite a struggle to get their bridge. The city was competing with Leavenworth, Kansas, then five times the size of Kansas City, and each was trying to persuade the Hannibal and St. Joe Railroad to run a line through its community.

It was the Kansas Citians who staged the better fight. From a population of 3,000, they managed to raise some $60,000 to build the coveted branch line from Cameron, Missouri to Kansas City. Men of prominence — Kersey Coates, Milton McGee, John W. Reed — raised the money by personal subscription and won the attention of the Boston railroad owners.

But once Kansas City defeated Leavenworth in he rivalry for the bridge, there were other problems. No one knew how long the bridge should be, and it took time and painstaking effort to angleize the distance from drawings. Missouri waters were rough and changeable, and Octave Chanute (the son of a French professor and the man chosen to design the bridge) struggled with several plans before he came up with a successful design — an idea adapted from a German bridge over the Rhine.

After several years of construction — when the Hannibal Bridge was at last completed — a dedication was held which was one of the great events in Kansas City history. The unforgettable celebration attracted nearly every able soul in the city. Early on the morning of July 3, 1869, the crowd gathered at the celebration site, along with notables from all over the United States...twenty-one mayors from other cities, five governors from out of state, aristocratic out-of-towners with carriages and footmen. On horseback, in buggies, wagons and omnibuses came throngs of eager people to witness the test of this massive Colossus of iron and wood.

Then, with everyone viewing, locomotives and trains of cars passed forward and backward over the bridge, with no vibration detectable. The Hannibal Bridge and Kansas City news media described the test this way:

A train of ten cars, drawn by a magnificent engine, Hannibal, from the Hannibal and St. Joe Road, entered upon the bridge from the northern shore. Hidden in flags, festooned and illuminated with flowers, the gala train moved majestically across. The train halted on this side of the bridge and gave time for the examination of cars. They were of the very finest quality, two of them being A.B. Pullman's celebrated palace sleeping cars . . .

Then as the crowd watched with tense interest the bridge was swung around to let a gayly decked steamboat pass, and a great shout of triumph arose as the bridge swung easily back into position. The whole span had been swung with only four men at the levers.

After the successful demonstration of the bridge's strength and utility, a costly celebration thrilled the crowd. No one ever forgot the balloon ascension, in which a town jeweler sailed in the sky toward Independence . . . or the parade, military bands, speeches, or the giant barbecue held afterward in Evan's Woods, where two four-year-old steers were roasted whole, standing on their feet.

At the end of the day all the local powers-that-be assembled at the Coates House, then the Broadway Hotel, for a sumptuous feast.

Nothing was spared in making it the fanciest evening in many a decade — they brought in champagne, crates of free cigars, a mammoth cake ten feet long in the shape of the Hannibal Bridge, and there were fireworks visible through the banquet hall windows.

It was a proud moment for every Kansas Citian. Townspeople still talk about the coming of the Bridge, from stories passed down by their grandfathers. (And so, in fact, do Leavenworth residents who, to this day, contend that were it not for the bridge, Leavenworth would have been the metropolis Kansas City is today.)

The famous bridge survived well until 1886, when a span was blown down, and even through the flood of 1903, when it was again damaged. In 1917 a new bridge was opened just west of the old one. But the old Hannibal Bridge is still visible today just east of the Broadway Bridge. It is in use by railroads and serves barge traffic.

The Centennial Celebration next month will commemorate the Hannibal Bridge as the first north-south rail link in Kansas City and as an historic structure which not only brought great economic and population growth, but catapulted Kansas City into position as one of the nation's leading grain and transportation centers.

Ceremonies on July 3 will commence at 9:30 a.m. The program, to be conducted on a show wagon at First and Broadway, will include a band concert, speeches and remarks by mayors of Kansas City, Missouri; Independence; North Kansas City; and Kansas City, Kansas.

Eagleton Among Group Sampling Poverty Diet

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some congressmen, who earn $42,500 per year, are getting an inkling of what it's like to try to feed their families on a welfare budget.

A half dozen House and Senate members are in the fifth day of a six-day program of living on a food allowance averaging 18 cents a day per person for meals.

"I'm hungry," commented Rep. Abner J. Mikva, D-Ill. "You start thinking about eating too much of the time. You're constantly aware of the fact that you're not getting enough to eat."

The congressmen are taking part in a program sponsored by the National Welfare Rights Organization, which is trying to win a guaranteed annual income of $5,500 a year for a family of four.

The congressional wives are leaning heavily on peanut butter, oatmeal and, in some cases, grits to get them through to the end of the experiment Wednesday.

At the home of Sen. Walter F. Mondale, D-Minn., the kitchen cabinets are taped shut to discourage the children from copping between-meal snacks. One youngster tried a little biscuit mix right out of the box.

John McCloskey, 14-year-old son of Republican Rep. Paul N. McCloskey Jr. of California, is "simply starving," says his mother.

But Mrs. McCloskey notes that her family, in contrast to families which live on welfare, was well fed right up to the time they started on the welfare food budget.

"We'll never be able to feel the hunger that they feel," she said.

For the McCloskey family, breakfast is either oatmeal with brown sugar or pancakes made from self-rising flour. Lunch is a peanut butter and honey sandwich with a beef stock soup. Dinner is likely to be meatless spaghetti.

"You don't even go near the produce department," said Mrs. McCloskey. "The only vegetable we've had is cabbage."

Mrs. McCloskey says her teen-aged daughter doesn't mind the diet because she wants to lose weight.

But Mikva said he finds he doesn't lose any weight.

"It's a bloated kind of a diet," he said. "All of us are eating peanut butter like it's going out of style."

Others taking part in the experiment are Democratic Sens. Thomas F. Eagleton of Missouri, Frank Church of Idaho, and Eugene J. McCarthy of Minnesota.

The welfare organization, which is marking its third anniversary, hopes the diet will help win congressional support for its programs.

"I hope it will just make people aware of the fact that there really are people who—on the officially sanctioned welfare budget—cannot get enough to eat," said Mikva.

Brewery Hopes To Resume Beer Production Soon

ST. LOUIS (AP)— Anheuser-Busch, the nation's largest brewery, hopes to resume full beer production by mid-week with the end of a strike that shut down the brewer's seven plants for five weeks.

Approximately 10,000 employes, idled since May 27, went back to work this morning after settlement of walkouts at the Jacksonville, Fla., and Houston, Tex., breweries.

Teamsters locals, representing Anheuser-Busch brewers, signed one-year contracts at both plants over the weekend.

The Jacksonville brewer is new. Ratification of its initial contract resolved the nationwide strike. Details of the settlements were not immediately available from company headquarters in St. Louis.

When workers at Jacksonville struck, members from that local manned out across the country and picketed the breweries still under contract. Anheuser-Busch was forced to shut down its other plants in St. Louis, Tampa, Fla.; Los Angeles; Newark, N.J.; and Columbus, Ohio.

Renato Cueller, business representative for the Houston local, said the new pact calls for a 30 cent-an-hour raise to $4.20 an hour, company increases in the union's health, welfare and pension funds, and increased vacation time.

A company spokesman said the firm had enough beer in storage to begin deliveries relatively soon.

Danforth Sets Procedures for Drug Claims

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth announced today procedures have been set up for Missouri consumers to file claims for overcharges of antibiotics.

Any Missouri resident who purchased aureomycin, terramycin or tetracycline from 1954 to 1966 may file a claim. A fund of over $880,000 will be created to handle claims.

To file, a consumer should send a sworn statement listing the amount of his purchases, or a certified copy of his druggist's statements showing the purchases to P.O. Box 727, Bronx, New York, 10451.

The statement should include total purchases by year of each drug, the pharmacy and any reimbursements received. Danforth said written proof may be required later.

Claims should be portmarked before Aug. 16 and include the name and address of the claimant.

"We hope Missourians who have been required to pay high prices for these drugs will file claims for recovery," Danforth said. "Druggists will be able to perform a valuable service for their patrons by furnishing them copies of back invoices or statements showing the amounts of their purchases."

The attorney general said it will be at least six months before claim payments can be made.

Recovery of overpayments for the drugs was made possible by a recent U.S. Supreme Court ruling that many of the nation's drug manufacturer's conspired to fix prices.

Nixons Get Taste of High Mortgage Rates

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (AP) — Richard M. Nixon and Pat R. Nixon, his wife, hereinafter called the mortgagors, join millions of Americans today in feeling the home financing crunch.

Their first monthly payment of $740 is due on the $100,000, 25-year mortgage they took out May 22 on a home they purchased Dec. 19.

The mortgagors, who also have a Washington residence, are paying 7½ per cent interest on the home loan from Greater Miami Federal Savings and Loan Association. That's less than in some areas of the country, but it's the going rate around Miami.

The Nixons paid $127,800 for the house at 516 Bay Lane, Key Biscayne, according to land records, so the mortgage is for 78 per cent of its value. Greater Miami normally loans up to 80 per cent for conventional mortgages.

The house, which was purchased from wealthy Cuban exile Manuel Arca Jr., is a rambling, pale-blue structure 200 feet from the shore of Biscayne Bay. It is surrounded by 10-foot-high hibiscus bushes and the street is blocked to public traffic by the Secret Service.

The mortgage on it isn't Nixon's only home finance headache—his taxes just went up, too.

The assessment on the house was $56,100 in 1968, but was increased in May to $93,070. The assessment on the house next door, which the Nixons also own, went from $60,650 to $75,860 as part of the pattern of skyrocketing Key Biscayne values.

The property tax bill this year on the two houses will be more than $3,700.

Taxes also are going up on three other Bay Lane houses used by Nixon as part of the little White House complex.

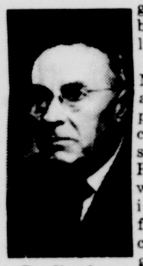
The Huge Salary Hike

A 41 PER CENT salary increase for senators and congressmen became law earlier this year.



Dr. Kershner

President Nixon, having accepted a 100 per cent increase in the salary of the President, sent word to the Capitol that he favored the increase for congressmen and senators. In so doing he missed a great opportunity to win the favor of both his supporters and his opposition. Had he rejected for the time being the President's increase on the ground that in this time of inflation, war and surtaxes, the increase was not in the best interest of the country, he might have won the strong support of the great majority of the American people. If he had rejected the increase in the President's salary, he would have been in a strong position to recommend that Congress do likewise.

The salaries of congressmen and senators have been increased from $30,000 to $42,500, Cabinet members from $35,000 to $60,000 and Supreme Court Justices from $39,500 to $60,000. Lower court judges and agency heads will get substantial but smaller, increases.

Sen. John J. Williams of Delaware said a raise of this size for congressmen and senators would trigger a serious new round of inflation. It would lead to pay raises all down the line in government. He warned that it would cost the taxpayers about $4.5 billion a year.

After the President has accepted an increase of 100 percent and Congress has accepted a 41 percent increase, how can they ask labor, doctors, clerks and all categories of employees to be satisfied with three, four, five or even ten percent? It is unrealistic for government leaders to think they can do this for themselves at the taxpayers' expense, while asking other elements of the population to show more patriotism and refrain from demanding similar consideration.

The public ought not to be asked to pay its government leaders salaries comparable to what they could earn in private industry. All of them have the choice of returning to private industry if they wish. There might be some advantage in replacing them by patriotic men who were willing to contribute more of their time and talents for the benefit of the country. The time was—and not too long ago—when our most competent citizens considered it an honor to be invited to Washington to perform essential work, at a salary of $1.00 a year.

One Dies as Aged Sisters Lose Way Home 2½ Days

CLERMONT, Fla. (AP) — For nearly 2½ days, sisters Katherine and Louisa Freidrich drove through a maze of roads in rural Lake County, trying to find their way home.

They began their journey last Friday. Today, Louisa was in a local hospital. Katherine was dead.

Police said the two elderly schoolteacher spinsters drove almost continuously from Friday afternoon until Sunday night, trying to get home from Tavares, 20 miles away.

Sunday night, they turned onto a dirt road that took them into a vast orange grove where their 1966 Plymouth became mired in the sandy soil.

A power company crew Monday found Katherine, 80, dying in the hot sun of heat and exhaustion. Five hours later, searchers found Louisa, 84, lying in the shade, asleep, a half mile from the car.

Exhausted and incoherent, Louisa was rushed to a Clermont hospital in the same ambulance that had taken her sister's body away.

"It looks like they were too proud to stop and ask somebody to take them home," said Clermont police dispatcher A. B. Broyles.

"They just kept driving asking directions, and driving, but the more they drove, the more confused they became."

Louisa was recovering today but Broyles said she didn't recall too much after they turned into the orange grove.

"We're still trying to determine where they spent Friday and Saturday nights," he said. "It's almost certain they slept in the car, or kept driving. None of the motels in the area put them up."

Clermont Police Chief Prentice Tyndall, with the rescuers who found Louisa, had searched for the women since their older sisters, "one about 86 and the other near 90," called him Friday night.

"They just stayed one step ahead of us," Tyndall said.

He said Katherine's old, cracked leather purse was packed with scraps of paper scrawled over with highway directions.

"They stopped at various places to ask the way home but they just kept getting lost," Tyndall added.

A member of the group that found Louisa said: "She's lucky that power crew was working in the grove. The orange picking is almost ended now and she could have been in there three weeks before anybody from the grove went into that section."

Tyndall said Louisa apparently thought she was at home and, on seeing her rescuers, demanded to know "what are all these policemen doing in my yard?"

A hospital spokesman said Louisa was in good condition but could not recall what had happened since she and Katherine left Tavares. He said she had not been told of her sister's death.

Remodeling Continues at Webb Jr. High

EAST PRAIRIE -- As in the past years, the summer vacation is being put to good use in local schools. A major project being undertaken at the present time in the local school system is at the Webb Junior High Building. The building which in the past was the agriculture building is being remodeled and repaired, which includes a new extended roof. When the work is completed it will be divided into three special education classes for the R-2 Schools and junior high music classes will also be held in the building.

Last year when the junior high gym was remodeled, the space between the gym and the shower rooms was utilized and made into added shower facilities and dressing rooms.

Another project at the junior high building for the summer is the painting of the cafeteria.

The high school site has recently had some work done around the athletic field. The field was enclosed with a 6 ft. high, chain link fence. Although no date has been set for the completion of this project, the track, lights and bleachers will be added only as funds are available.

Superintendent, Ray Melton states that the following year's curriculum will be about the same as last. One 5th grade teacher will be added. He also said that again this year as last, a basic home economics course will be offered to 8th grade boys. Last year was the first time this has been done here.

DAEOC Office Has Nurses Aide Class

EAST PRAIRIE - A Nurse's Aide class is being organized to start next month. This will be taught at the local center and anyone interested may contact the DAEOC center.

Senior Citizens meetings are held each Tuesday afternoon at the local center.

Each Tuesday night at 7:30 the Arts & Crafts class meets at the center. Anyone who would be interested in learning any craft may come and we will find a teacher for you.

We are still recruiting for a GED class. Anyone who would be interested in finishing their high school education may contact the center.

Savings and Loan Pays $70,905 In Dividends

CHARLESTON - The Mississippi County Savings and Loan Association this week announced payment of $70,905.53 in dividends to its investors as of June 22, according to Mrs. Glenn Hutson, secretary of the association.

The dividends are paid in two ways, Mrs. Hutson said. Holders of stock certificates receive checks through the mail for their dividends, while passbook account investors have the dividend credited to their accounts.

The June dividend last year totalled $62,864, Mrs. Hutson said, and she added that the December payment was $64,789. The increase, she said, reflects the continued growth of savings invested in the locally managed institution.

Total dividends during the past 12 months have amounted to $135,694, the secretary said.

Midwestern Governors In Conference

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — The Midwestern Governors Conference was to open its formal business sessions today with greetings from Gov. Warren Knowles of Wisconsin, conference chairman, and Gov. Robert Docking of Kansas.

The 15-state conference was formed in 1962 to study mutual problems. Vice President Spiro Agnew will address the governors Tuesday night.

The four-state Ozark Regional Commission of Kansas, Missouri, Arkansas and Oklahoma got in some early work on its special affairs Sunday, besides electing Docking as its chairman Sunday. He succeeds Gov. Dewey Bartlett of Oklahoma.

E. L. Stewart, federal cochairman of the commission, suggested that a regional highway authority be formed to develop such roads as a toll road from Kansas City to the Gulf of Mexico.

Stewart proposed that the authority have nine members, with five of them appointed by the federal government and one each by the four states.

He was authorized to begin consultations with the Bureau of Public Roads. He will report the results at the commission's fall meeting.

Stewart suggested that a state line road might be acceptable, with two lanes in Kansas and two lanes in Missouri.

Safeguard Charged for Illegal Outlay

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration was accused today of illegally spending $400 million from funds appropriated for the discarded Sentinel missile defense system on the revamped Safeguard program.

Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., in a prepared statement, said the Pentagon spent the money on Safeguard missiles and radar equipment although Congress has not approved the project and in spite of a Defense Department promise not to use the Sentinel funds.

"The fact is," Nelson said, "Congress has not authorized or appropriated one cent for the new Safeguard system. The administration's decision to spend Sentinel monies on the Safeguard system is a clear violation of the Congress' law-making authority."

Nixon junked the "thin" Sentinel system, which was designed to protect the nation's major cities, last March and asked Congress to approve the Safeguard system, armed at defending U.S. land-based offensive missiles.

Nelson's blast came after the President had put on his softest velvet glove in an attempt to break the apparent near deadlock in the Senate over Safeguard.

He met for an hour-and-a-half at the White House with five Republican Senate critics of the missile defense system—Sens. Charles Percy of Illinois, Charles McC. Mathias Jr. of Maryland, Marlow W. Cook of Kentucky, James B. Pearson of Kansas and Richard S. Schweiker of Pennsylvania.

Nixon's approach was of the softest soft-sell.

"The President emphasized that each member of Congress would have to exercise his own conscience. I had no feeling of being persuaded," Sen. Mathias said after the session.

Percy called the meeting, which had been scheduled for only 45 minutes, very friendly and said the President didn't even discuss Safeguard until he brought it up.

None of the five indicated any change of mind after the meeting.

With the vote expected to be very close, Nixon needs all the GOP support he can get, but he apprently intends to stay away from blatant partisan pressure rather than chance alienating other senators.

In Nelson's statement today, he said Deputy Secretary of Defense David Packard told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee March 26 that money appropriated for Sentinel would not be spent on Safeguard. But Nelson said that Packard told newsmen May 13 that Safeguard missiles and radars are being purchased with Sentinel funds.

"This is precisely the kind of contradictory stand that contributed to the previous administration's serious loss of credibility with the American people and Congress," he said.

Alcohol—A Great Enemy

SEVENTY percent of all Americans drink. This is the finding of a government-sponsored study titled, Alcohol Problems — A Report to the Nation. The report also shows that one-third of all arrests are for drunkenness and almost half of all drivers involved in fatal accidents have a very high level of alcohol in their system.

Dr. Kershner

After citing these figures, the report suggests that there should be more education on the dangers of drinking. Which makes sense. But then comes a shocker. The report concludes that the legal drinking age should be lowered to 18 and that the use of alcohol be included at church functions and in the home—even for children.

The problems caused by alcohol are not caused by the time, the place of the manner in which it is used, but by the alcohol itself. It is a narcotic drug that requires increased consumption to satisfy the craving which it creates. Safety lies in not using alcohol at all.

We need more scientific teaching about alcohol and its dangers. The textbooks of our country used to tell boys and girls about the effect of alcohol on the human system. Each chapter of some physiology books ended by describing the effects of alcohol on the particular part of the body studied in that chapter.

Self-preservation alone should lead us to make a strong effort to warn young people of the dangers of drinking. To approve the use of alcohol in the sacred circles of home and church is, in our opinion, to desert our Judeo-Christian faith. And it is a long step toward the betrayal of our children into the hands of this treacherous enemy of their health, happiness and success.

Storing in Plastic Bag Keeps Oven Rack Clean

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY—When recently cleaning my stove, it dawned on me that I seldom used the second rack but when I cleaned the oven it was always dirty, too. Now I keep this rack stored in a plastic bag, where it is handy if I should need it but I am saved that bit of useless cleaning.—MRS. D. H.

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY—I have just become confined to a wheelchair and wondered if some readers would give me some Pointers to help me do more things for myself and around the house. I would appreciate any ideas.—MRS. C. A. F.

DEAR POLLY—Apparently you and Mrs. J. A. G. have never worn contact lenses. I refer to her Pointer for storing them in hair spray can tops. These lenses should not be left in open containers to dry out but should soak when not being worn. Also, tiny bits of lint from cotton padding could cling to the edges. My optometrist passed this information along to me. By following his advice to the letter, I have worn contacts successfully for six years. Somebody goofed, who?—MRS. L. I. Y.

No one, really. Optometrists differ on this point.—POLLY

DEAR POLLY—A gift my bride-to-be daughter received at a shower given for her was a gift certificate from a supermarket. Both she and her future husband were most pleased with this. They know they can go shopping and not have to worry about money the first week they are at home, as they might otherwise have had to do after all the wedding and honeymoon expenses. We enjoy the Pointers and some have already helped the bride-to-be.—MRS. L. G.

Share your favorite homemaking ideas . . . and send them to Polly in care of The Daily Sikeston Standard. You'll receive a bright, new silver dollar if Polly uses your idea in Polly's Pointers.

Viet Peace 1 to 3 Years Away, U.S. Aides Feel

By RAY CROMLEY
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON (NEA)

It can be reported flatly that key men in the highest circles of government do not expect a settlement on Vietnam short of one, two or three years—perhaps longer.

The signs are more toward two or three years than one.

There is a strong belief in these circles the settlement, when and if it does come, most probably will not occur at the official Paris talks between the North Vietnamese and the Viet Cong on one side and the United States and South Vietnamese on the other.

Rather, a settlement is believed much more likely to come as a result of the now much-publicized efforts at private talks between the South Vietnamese and the Viet Cong.

These talk efforts have not been at all fruitful to date, by all known standards. they have gotten nowhere, so far as is known in American circles. Nevertheless, there is a great deal of optimism here on the possibilities.

The U.S. optimism is based primarily on the belief among American experts on Vietnam that the Vietnamese are extremely pragmatic-practical people and are very likely to find a solution to the thorny political problems inherent in any peace settlement once they put their minds to it. But it will take a long time. Long, slow dickering is a Vietnamese characteristic, especially when the problems are as tough as these are.

It may be that, even when and if results begin to develop from the private talks, U.S. officials may not know what is happening. Both the Vietnamese and Americans are agreed that the less Washington's officials know the better.

The thinking is that once something became known in Washington, regardless of how secretly classified, some American official would be certain to talk "off the record." Such private leaks would get around and could blow the works.

The South Vietnamese know this and therefore are playing their cards close to their chests.

There is no worry here in the administration that the South Vietnamese would sell out their country. So there's complete confidence in the South Vietnamese pursuing their own course privately and secretly while the Paris negotiations go on in public.

The 25,000-troop withdrawal this summer is, of course, intended to buy time in the United States (in Congress and among the American people) for the South Vietnamese to do this secret negotiating.

The way it looks now, if things go right, officials say privately they would expect another 25,000 troops or so will be withdrawn every three to six months, as necessary, to continue buying the extra time it is believed these negotiators will require.

GIs Hold Tom Sawyer Contest In Vietnam

VUNG TAU, Vietnam (AP)—Nobody had caught any frogs for the frog jumping contest, and it wasn't a Missouri rain that dampened the day, but a Vietnamese monsoon.

Still, the greased pig squalled as well as any back in Hannibal and all the contestants got as much whitewash on them as on the picket fence, so it had to be a fine Tom Sayer's day.

No one even cared that some of the Becky Thatcher contestants had beards.

"I've waited so long for this," smiled pretty Dawn Mendias of Chicago, who helped organize the whole thing Sunday for the USO United Service Organizations at this Vietnamese beach resort, a GI recreation center about 40 miles southeast of Saigon. "I'm so happy it came off well in spite of the rain — but that poor pig!" The pig, greased with lard, was a 200-lb. sow bought from a Vietnamese farmer. She knew she was too old to outrun her pursuers, so she took cover in a clump of bushes, a good tactic because the 30 young servicemen who charged in after her ran into a hive of bees.

They later maneuvered the pig out and a 22-year-old Seabee from Westbrook, Minn., EO3 Robert Nelson, brought her home to the cheers of a couple of hundred onlookers, including scattered groups of Vietnamese who peeked over a fence and shook their heads.

A red-haired Missouri boy, 18-year-old Pfc. Thomas L. Comstock of Independence, caught her the second time around.

As the USO girls fretted about the pig's health, Nelson and Comstock explained they had caught some greased pigs in their time-at country fairs back home.

Fence painting was next, and Spec. 4 Anthony Banardo, 19, an aircraft electrician from Los Angeles, painted pickets faster and better than his 29 competitors and got the Tom Sawyer award and $100.

He also got to name a representative to the annual Tom Sawyer fence painting contest to be held in Hannibal, Mo., July 5. He chose his 15-year-old cousin, Perry Lee Codianni of Cheshire, Conn. The boy's trip will be paid for by the Hannibal Jaycees, who supplied advice for the contest here, officials said.

The day was capped by a Becky Thatcher contest and first prize went to an Army nurse, Capt. Heidi Ubel of Knapp, Wis., based at the 36th Evacuation Hospital at Vung Tau. She won over a half-dozen other girls and three husky GIs garbed in wigs and miniskirts, their bulk protruding from splits in the seams.

Among the onlookers were wounded servicemen clad in blue pajamas. One of them, Spec. 4 Salvatore Scalo, 21, of Somerville, Mass., a machine gunner who was wounded in the thighs by shrapnel June 19 during his eighth month in the war.

"It's great," he said of the shenanigans. "It's the first time I've been able to laugh since I've been in Vietnam."

Man of 44 With Heart of 17 Feels Normal

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A 44-year-old Indianapolis school teacher with a 17-year-old heart says he feels like "nothing's ever been changed."

America's longest surviving heart transplant recipient, Louis B. Russell Jr., is paneling his basement walls, bicycles regularly with his children, and recently climbed up on the roof of his two-story home for a repair job.

A year ago, he says, he was in "bad, bad shape."

That was before he entered the hospital at the Medical College of Virginia in Richmond where on Aug. 24, 1968, he became the world's 24th heart transplant patient.

Russell resumed teaching industrial arts this spring.

He speaks before local clubs and statewide meetings in Indianapolis. He has made dozens of talks since last January and is booked through next February.

Russell said his checkup this month is an exploratory operation to see what condition the heart is in.

After being considered for the transplant last year, Russell talked with his wife and four children.

He decided that "if I didn't survive, I'd be asleep. I wouldn't know anything about it. And if I did or didn't survive, look at the millions of people we would have helped. It was a chance for me and a chance for them. I knew they didn't do this unless you're dying."

Russell added: "I am a Christian. I believe the doctors had a lot to do with this, but I believe God had a lot to do with it, too."

Fitzhugh Unlikely Choice To Head Pentagon Study

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gilbert Fitzhugh says he doesn't know much about defense spending, cost overruns and all that. But based on what he's read, "somebody ought to look into it, and it looks like its going to be me."

This was the reaction of the insurance industry executive—who never served in the military—after being named to head a panel which will recommend changes in the complex Pentagon operation.

President Nixon, appointing the 1930 Princeton graduate upon recommendation of Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird, charged the panel with studying the Pentagon's organization, procurement practices and research and development programs.

Formation of the group—the remaining dozen members or so are still to be named—comes at a time of intense criticsm about wasteful defense spending, sloppy military planning and civilian-military struggle over influence in the Pentagon.

Fitzhugh, a white-haired grandfatherly looking man, told Pentagon reporters he has opinions about such things as antiballistic missile deployment and Vietnam.

But he wouldn't say what his views are and "I am going to try very hard to keep them out of my study."

The purpose of the blue ribbon panel, as Nixon described it, is not to determine national policy but to make recommendations on how the defense establishment can operate more efficiently and effectively.

The year-long study will, as Laird put it, be the most comprehensive review of the Defense Department since the Hoover Commission studies of 1947 and 1953.

"I am confident," Laird said in presenting Fitzhugh to reporters, "that the panel's recommendations will enable the department to perform its national security mission better, and to save the taxpayer money by eliminating wasteful practices of the past."

Laird said a review of the Pentagon's farflung complex "is very much needed in order to restore public confidence in the Department of Defense and the credibility of the Department of Defense."

The panel will be delving into the Pentagon's organizational Labyrinth during a period when, as Laird acknowledged, more responsibility is being turned over to the military in the Pentagon.

About $500,000 has been tentatively earmarked to pay for the panel's staff, although the members will serve without pay.

Fitzhugh said he has no illusions and no preconceived ideas on what should or shouldn't be probed in the course of the review.

The first thing on the panel's agenda, he said, will be to find out "how we are going to attack, to take hold of this tremendous problem."

The group's four-point charter as drawn up by Laird calls for it to study, report and make recommendations on:

—"The organization and management of the Department of Defense, including the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the Defense agencies and the military services ... with emphasis on the responsiveness to the requirements of the President and the secretary of defense."

—Defense research, including mission goals, costs and relationships with science and industry.

—"Defense procurement policies and practices, particularly as they relate to costs, time and quality."

—And other matters may be submitted to the panel in the coming months.

Successor Sought For Dean English

COLUMBIA--Chancellor John W. Schwada of the University of Missouri has announced a search committee elected by the faculty to assist him in seeking a successor to Dr. Earl F. English as dean of the school of journalism.

Dean English, who has headed the Missouri School of Journalism since 1951, reaches the compulsory retirement age of 65 and will retire from the deanship in 1970.

The search committee is made up of Dr. Herbert W. Schooling, dean of faculties, and five members of the journalism faculty: Professors Milton Gross; chairman, W.B. Bickley, Edward C. Lambert, Paul L. Myhre, and Keith Sanders.

The committee will confer with representatives of professional and alumni groups, as well as students, before submitting its recommendations to Chancellor Schwada. Those representatives are Marion Ridings, president, Missouri Press Association, the Advocate-Hamiltonian, Hamilton; Jerry Sweaney, president, Missouri Broadcasters Association, Station KTTS-TV, Springfield; Roy L. Moskop, president, Journalism Alumni Association, Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., St. Louis; and James Holmberg, president, Journalism Students Association.

Wheelchair Driver Exempted From Driver License Law

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Ray Lewis has been given the clearance by Florida's top trooper to speed away in his motorized wheelchair at full tilt — six miles an hour — without licenses.

Several weeks ago a state trooper pulled Lewis, 24, to the side of the road and suggested he get a license plate and a driver's license plate and a driver's license to operate his battery-driven wheelchair.

But Tuesday, Col. H.N. Kirkman, Florida Highway Patrol director, said that whether the law on licenses applies to wheelchair drivers "depends on who interprets the law," and Lewis will not be required to get one.

Symington Urges U.S. Aid for Rain Soaked Farms

WASHINGTON — Sen. Stuart Symington (D-Mo.) today urged federal farm officials in Missouri to assist farmers in Mid-Missouri, who have suffered serious setbacks due to excess rain.

The senator was acting in response to phone calls and a wire he received from farm and business leaders in Audrain and other Mid-Missouri counties.

"Some people seem to think they can gain rights by committing wrongs."

WELFARE MOTHERS IN ACTION

Some of the ugliness and moral cowardice on the national scene these days is almost beyond belief. Certainly, it is hard to believe what happened at the recent National Conference of Social Welfare in Washington. Yet it did happen.

The Washington Post was handicapped in its reporting of the shocking events at the conference, for much of what was said could not be printed in a family newspaper.

The 5,000 social workers who gathered in the capital for their annual meeting were subjected to a stream of four-letter obscenities. Members of welfare "rights" organizations jumped on the stage and took over the microphones. They shouted vile words at the audience of social workers. These workers were called "racist pigs" and members of the "white imperialistic oppressive society." Such terms were mild compared to other words and phrases employed. The Washington Post referred to "obscene" demands made by the welfare mothers.

But that wasn't all. When one of the captive audience attempted to lead a mass walkout from the conference room, a human chain of welfare mothers blocked the exits. Dr. George A. Wiley, head of the welfare protesters, declared nobody was going to leave until thousands of dollars were anted up for more of the poor to attend conference meetings. With that, plastic ice buckets were passed around for financial contributions.

The Post reported that it was necessary for the temporary ballroom dividing wall to be removed in order for the delegates to the conference to escape.

This unspeakably crude and insulting session was not the last, however. Wiley and his welfare mothers carried out other interruptions of the proceedings during the remaining days of the conference. Unscheduled speakers, who broke into the meeting, included black social workers, Puerto Ricans, an Indian and a young woman who shrilled that she was a former mental patient and an ex-drug addict.

The social workers apparently were stunned by the experience. One of them told a reporter: "I said to myself this couldn't be happening to US."

As shocking as the behavior of the welfare mothers, was the craven attitude of the outgoing president, Dr. Arthur S. Flemming, who also is president of the National Council of Churches. He didn't order the silencing or removal of the welfare mothers who shouted obscenities of the delegates. On the contrary, against the advice of some of his board members, he refused to stop anyone from speaking. When the time came to turn over the presidential gavel to the incoming president, Dr. Fleming bragged "I did not use this gavel once this week – I didn't think it was appropriate."

The public has no idea what the delegates thought of Dr. Flemming's toleration of obscenity - shouting disruptionists. But many Americans familiar with the story of these shocking events in Washington must be sickened by Dr. Flemming's attitude. The country simply cannot afford mental confusion or moral leniency in confrontations with barbarians. This is what America really faces today, and which was manifested at the social workers conference in Washington -- barbarism.

Educated men and women who refuse to apply the remedies of law and order when confronted by savage behavior, as in the case of the welfare mothers at Washington, are exposing the nation to rule by barbarians.

It is a mistake to think of barbarism and savagery as features of the ancient past or remote jungle areas. Even the most advanced socieities can be exposed to primitivism within. The methods used by the welfare "rights" organizations are manifestations of this primitivism.

In New York City, members of welfare "rights" have attacked city welfare officers, broken furniture and upset files -- all because they weren't getting the size relief payments they demanded. Toleration of this kind of violent behavior is impossible if America is to remain a civilized country. Some people, like Dr. Flemming, apparently regard toleration as the ultimate viture, but it is obvious from the ugly events of our time that excessive toleration is a major evil. It opens the door to the worst excesses in human behavior.

It is time for all Americans to view toleration in perspective and to insist that the organizations to which they belong adopt a get-tough policy with respect to disruptionists.

Mrs. Jules Lederer (otherwise known as Ann Landers) with her husband. Today is their 30th wedding anniversary. "A successful marriage is not a gift, it is an achievement," Mrs. Lederer writes.

Today's A Special Day For Ann Landers

By MRS. JULES LEDERER
(ANN LANDERS)

Dear Readers: This may be just another day to you, but it is a very special day in my life. Thirty years ago, on a sweltering Sunday afternoon in Sioux City, Iowa, Jules Lederer slipped a plain gold band on my finger and I became his wife.

Honesty forbids me describing myself as a student at Morningside College, so I'll simply say I was enrolled there. Jules had had one year at Northwestern — High School, that is. He was a product of Detroit, handsome, energetic, imaginative, a born optimist and eager to take on the world. He had a good job and a promising future. He was also broke.

I was an effervescent, fun-loving girl, hopelessly square, driven by a crusading spirit to save the world — sort of a Jewish Joan of Arc. I was also engaged to marry a law student in California. But Jules, never one to be discouraged by small obstacles, asked me to marry him anyway. I said "yes" and the wedding took place three months later.

We were blessed the following year with a baby girl, Margo. From then on, I saw more of the moving van than I saw of Jules. When an opportunity for advancement arose, he took it. And it seemed always to be in another city. We moved from Sioux City to St. Louis, from St. Louis to New Orleans, from New Orleans to Milwaukee. Then came World War II and Jules served in the Infantry. In 1945 we moved from Little Rock to Los Angeles, from Los Angeles to Eau Claire, Wisconsin, and from Eau Claire to Chicago.

Time, that subtle thief of youth, is often cursed by those who long to stop the clock, or turn it back, but we want none of that. Each year has been better than the last because we have grown together. A good marriage, it is said, is made in heaven. This might be true, but the maintenance work must be done right down here. A successful marriage is not a gift, it is an achievement. No real marriage can exist without differences in opinion and the ensuing battles. But battles can be healthy. They bring to marriage the vital principle of equal partnership. If there is a secret to making marriage work, it is "Never go to bed mad."

Our 30 years together have been blessed with good health, good fortune, good friends, good times and success. Jules says he could not have made it without me. I am not sure he is right. But I could not have made it without him, and of this I am certain. He taught me how to be alone without feeling sorry for myself. He taught me never to back away from a challenge — that it is better to try and fail and then to try again. He taught me how to use my time productively. His work habits are impeccable. I learned mine from him.

Being Mrs. Jules Lederer has been superb training for Ann Landers. Thirty years with this unselfish, supportive, responsive man has enabled me to live life as few people have the opportunity to live it. Being Ann Landers' husband could pose a terrible problem,but Jules has met the challenge with dignity and incredible good humor. My husband is my best friend, and I am his. I consider it a privilege to be the wife of this beautiful guy who took on the world with a ninth-grade education and a hole in his sock.

A & W Celebrates Anniversary

Five decades ago the late Roy W. Allen opened the first of what is now the world's largest chain of franchised drive- in restaurants with more than 2,400 locations.

Using a unique root beer formula, a blend of the juices of 16 rare herbs, barks, and berries, Allen developed a beverage that has come to be known the world over as A&W Root Beer.

A&W Root Beer was first sold by Allen in an outlet in Lodi, Calif., on June 20, 1919. With his first beverage stand an immediate success, he opened a second one a year later in Sacramento, with three more soon to follow.

The third outlet in Sacramento, which was opened in 1923, is considered to be the first "drive- in" in the United States. Located at 16th and "K" Streets, the root beer dispense was mounted on a trailer and car hosts and hostesses were called "tray boys" or tray girls."

The name A&W was actually born in 1922 when Allen joined forces with an employee, Fred Wright. Together they opened three "walk-ins" in Houston, Texas, which were the first under the name and trademark of A&W. This partnership, however, lasted only until 1924 when Allen bought out Wright's interests.

The A&W trademark and trade name were registered that same year, and by 1925 an active franchise program had begun. By the end of 1926, a series of A&W stands were in operation in Northern and Central California and in the Midwest.

Over the years, Allen had several partners and many outlets, but one of his most successful early ventures was his second A&W Drive-In in Salt Lake City. Fabulously successful, it handled nothing but root beer and on hot summer days it is reported that as many as 10,000 root beers were sold.

Over the years, Allen had several partners and many outlets, but one of his most successful early ventures was his second A&W Drive-In in Salt Lake City. Fabulously successful, it handled nothing but root beer and on hot summer days it is reported that as many as 10,000 root beers were sold.

Remodeled and added- to many times, this A&W operated at the original locaton until very recently. Salt Lake City was also the site of the original A&W main office until 1932, when it was moved to Sacramento. In 1936 it was moved to the company's current home office location in Santa Monica, California.

During the early 1930's, there were 181 A&W's in operation, mainly in the Midwest. By 1941 there were 261 A&W's, although the number dropped to 180 just before World War II.

No additional A&W outlets were opened during the War but by 1947 the number rapidly increased to over 238, and by 1950 there were 451.

In June of 1950, Allen sold the business and all assets of the R.W. Allen partnership and corporation to Mr. and Mrs. Hurtz who formed the A&W Root Beer Co. Allen retired shortly thereafter.

Mr. Hurtz was president of A&W until he relinquished that position to Francis R. Loetterle in 1956. Loetterle is currently the president of the company.

Loetterle first joined A&W in 1954 as Executive Vice President. Under his leadership, the number of franchised drive-ins holding the A&W Root Beer license rose from approximately 800 in 1954 to the current number of 2,400.

Interest in the expansion of A&W activities was not confined to the United States. With the support of the directors of the corporation, Loetterle launched an international expansion program in 1956 when the company obtained a Master License for Canada. The first Canadian drive- in was established that year and today has grown to over 160 outlets.

Further foreign expansion came about in the Spring of 1962 with an A& W Drive-In in West Germany. There are now A&W outlets in other parts of Europe, Mexico, and the Far East.

In April of 1963 the A&W Root Beer Co. merged with J. Hungerford Smith, the firm that has produced its root beer formula since 1921. Then in April of 1966 both companies were acquired by United Fruit Company, headquartered in Boston. As a result, A&W Root Beer Co. became a wholly - owned subsidiary of U.F.C.

The management of both companies immediately agreed that it was time for a change -- both in the over-all operation of the A&W chain and in rowth plans for the years ahead.

From its humble beginning in 1919, A&W evolved from a series of "root beer stands" into an international chain of drive-in restaurants. Over the years the root beer "stands" started selling food items as their owners added such menu items as hot dogs, hamburgers, french fries and beef sandwiches. The company itself increased its beverage line to include such other drinks as cola, grape, orange, and lemon in addition to A&W Root Beer. They also made available to franchisees various other food products.

By the time A&W became a subsidiary of United Fruit Company, the chain was operating as a group of drive-in restaurants. However, seeing the need to increase operatons, develop new marketing objectives,and offer more services to the franchisee, the company decided to embark on a bold new program to become a full-fledged restaurant and food service organization. Thus, in February of 1968, the company adopted a modern new trademark and sign, and changed its name from A&W Root Beer Co. to A&W International, Inc.

Included in this program was the decision by management to operate a number of company-owned restaurants. During 1968, the company acquired several existing A&W Drive-In Restaurants and started construction on several new style experimental A&W Drive-In Restaurants. In addition, the company began construction on several Crandall House restaurants, the first full-service type restaurant by the firm. The first two were opened the latter part of 1968, and a third was opened in March of this year -- all in Southern California.

In January of this year (1969), after more than two years without issuing a new franchise, A&W introduced a new franchise offering featuring a totally new building and operational plan. Matched to the coming decade, the new building is called the A&W Model 70. It incorporates attractive decor, inside seating with both counter and booths, plus carpeting, and the most modern kitchen and service facilities. Drive-in car service with electronic ordering, under canopy, is optional. Initially, the company will be issuing these new A&W Model 70 franchises in a few key metropolitan or highly populated suburban markets.

At the same time, new developments are currently coming forth in the areas of operations, food product development, building design, financing, and personnel training, to name a few.

Looking toward the future, President Fran Loetterle states: "A&W is meeting the challenge and potential of the future. We can now provide our franchisees with leadership and know-how to successfully compete with other chains in this dynamic restaurant industry. Even though our firm will be a half-century old next year, all of us here at A&W view this dramatic step we are taking as an exciting new beginning."

Spradling Aids in Transplant Law

JEFFERSON CITY — State Sen. A.M. Spradling Jr., Cape Girardeau, was one of the senators instrumental in getting the uniform anatomical gift act passed by the state legislature.

Spradling and members of the Kidney Foundation of Metropolitan St. Louis, Inc., were present in Jefferson City to see Missouri Gov. Warren E. Hearnes sign the act which makes it legal to will organs of the body for transplantation to others. Until now, the legality of such an act was often questioned by next of kin.

The Kidney Foundation has been working for the passage of the act which would enable kidney transplants to become more common.

A kidney transplant operation has become one of the best alternatives for a patient with chronic kidney disease. The operation itself is sufficiently advanced to warrant it as a cure for the disease which is fatal without the twice-weekly treatments on an artificial kidney machine or a kidney transplant. Treatment on an artificial kidney machine runs approximately $15,000 a year, and while the operation is expensive, it is performed usually only once or twice in a person's lifetime and therefore is the least expensive in addition to being the only cure.

Kidney Foundation chairman in charge of the act, Mrs. Arturo Miserocchi, and Mr. Walter Beckers, president, were present at the signing. Their next immediate concern, they said, is to find blood donors who will be ready to give their blood to kidney transplant recipients.

With the signing into law of the act, the way is now open for Missourians to work toward financial assistance from the state government to ease the burden of those affected with chronic kidney disease. Beckers said a campaign is now underway to ask the state to increase appropriations for such aid.

Coeds Spend Summer Running Wheat Combines

CARMEN, Okla. (AP) — The wheat harvest offers lots of good, hard, grimy work and good pay for a summering college student, with plenty of fresh air — and mosquitoes. What more could a college girl want?

The four Kansas girls running combines in northwest Oklahoma this week say that's plenty — and in their view it sure beats being a camp counselor.

The coeds are earning college money this summer as field hands in the wheat harvest.

Their boss, Larry Paul, 32, of Shields, Kan., reports they are "working out better than the boys."

The girls are Pam Behring, 19; Beth Dondlinger, 19; Mary Becker, 17, and Kathy DeWitt, 18. Kathy is from Goddard, the others from Wichita.

When they came in from the fields at 10 p.m. Monday night they were dressed in work shirts, jeans and cut-offs, covered with dirt, wheat chaff and insect bites.

"I couldn't begin to count them," said Pam, a Kansas University junior, scartching at some bites. "I don't think there's enough room on my body for them."

"One neat thing is we can wear any old thing, like baggy jeans, and not roll our hair. But we sure learned to appreciate water," said Kathy. She attends Pratt, Kan., Junior College.

The feminine crew gets a lot of reaction from passersby on the country roads.

"They just stop and stare — and then wave," said Pam.

Paul reports, "I've sure had a lot more boys apply for work since they've seen my crew."

The girls at first had difficulty convincing their parents. So Larry Paul flew to Wichita to talk to the girls' fathers and reassure them.

Each girl has her "own personal combine" and does all the driving and cleaning, and much of the repair work—despite a final, desperate chorus of warnings from their parents to keep their hands away from the machinery.

"We each have special combines that we drive all the time and then if it breaks down we have to fix it," said Pam. "Boy, do they break down."

You've really never lived until you've cleaned up under a combine," said Kathy.

"My machine is called Ol' Smokey," said Mary Becker. "It's the first one loaded on the semi and gets all black and oily from the smoke."

Beth, a junior at St. Louis University, said that since they're a team of girls, they try harder.

"Everybody said they'd see us in two weeks, but we're determined to stick it out," she said. "I've been going to school all my life and this is the first time I've been able to see what I've accomplished."

Mary, a petite blonde freshman from Wichita State, remarked, "If I do leave, my mother and dad won't know about it until the end of the summer."

Paul said the crew would follow the ripening wheat northward as far as North Dakota before the girls return to school in August. He said the girls are "good workers" and he is pleased enough with their performance to want to try the idea again.

Some of World's Finest Tripoli Mined in Missouri

PEORIA, Okla. (AP) - Tripoli, an abrasive mineral used in all sections of the world, is putting this tiny northeastern Oklahoma town on the map.

Peoria, a town of 156 residents, lies in the middle of the world's richest tripoli mining area, Ottawa County, Okla., and Newton County, Mo.

"This is the only area of the world that has this quality tripoli," said Mine Inspector Ward Padgett.

Tripoli is a rare mineral and a valuable one. Production in Oklahoma last year totaled 32,294 tons, compared with 25,574 in 1967.

Two companies mine the 500-square-mile area, sending raw materials to a processing plant in Seneca, Mo. From there the tripoli is shipped to all parts of the world for use as an abrasive material.

Tripoli is a comparatively soft, porous matieral surface mined in the two-county area. It is used not only as an abrasive, but also in concrete, foundry partings, oil well drilling mud, polishing paste, paint filler, paper and rubber.

Large amounts of the product are exported for the buffing and polishing trade and it is used extensively in smoothing auto paint jobs.

"Tripoli is so rare you don't find it in too many other places in the world," Padgett said.

"And the Oklahoma-Missouri formation is the best quality in the world."

The mineral deposits are seldom more than 12 feet thick with formations varying from 2-20 feet in depth.

Exact tonnagege of the area is unknown, but Padgett estimates the yield at 3.25 billion tons.

American Tripoli Division of Ottawa County holds leases on thousands of acres in the rich tripoli area. It also mines the Missouri formations and operates the processing plant at Seneca.

Also mining in the area is Miami Tripoli, Inc. which began operations in 1967.

Silver Star to Clarkton Soldier

LONG BINH, Vietnam — Army Second Lieutenant Lee D. Robinson, 23, son of Mrs. Jeraldine Robinson, Clarkton, Mo., received the Silver Star May 10 near Long Binh, Vietnam.

Lt. Robinson received the award for gallantry in action while engaged in ground operations against a hostile force in Vietnam.

A platoon administrative officer in the 2nd Civil Affairs Company of the II Fields Force, Vietnam near Long Binh, Lt. Robinson entered the Army in June 1968. He was stationed at Ft. Bliss, Texas before arriving overseas in September 1968.

The lieutenant received a B.S. degree in forestry from the University of Missouri at Columbia in 1968. He received his commission through the Reseserve Officers' Training Corps program at the school.

By direction of the President the Silver Star is presented to Second Lieutenant Lee D. Robinson for gallantry in action on 23 February 1969 while serving with the 7th AA Platoon, 2d Civil Affairs Company, in the Republic of Vietnam. On this date when the Province civilian housing compound came under an enemy mortar attack and ground assault, Lieutenant Robinson twice observed several enemy soldiers attempting to enter the compound and on both occasions, after a fierce fight, he forced them to withdraw.

Finding that one of his men had been wounded, Lieutenant Robinson used his body as a shield to move the casualty to safety and medical assistance. Throughout the intensive engagement, Second Lieutenant Robinson's exceptional courage and unwavering dedication to duty were in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

Annual Sessions Of Legislature Up to Voters

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The proposition of annual legislative sessions in Missouri now is up to the voters.

Bot houses now have approved a proposed constitutional change calling for a 5½month legislative session in oddnumbered years and a 4½-month session in even-numbered years.

Vetoes by the governor of bills passed in odd-numbered years could be considered by the Legislature at the start of the session in even-numbered years.

Bills left over at the end of the session in even-numbered years would be dead.

The governor could still call special sessions of not more than 60 calendar days.

Several attempts were made to keep bills left over at the end of odd-numbered yearsalive for the next session, but sponsors said although they favored such a proposition they were afraid to amend the proposal and send it back to the Senate this late in the session.

The Legislature could set its own pay, mileage and expenses and could increase the number of its employes.

Technique of Handling Air Traffic Offered

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration has proposed a new technique of handling air traffic to relieve congested air lanes, improve safety and reduce flying times by allowing more direct flights between airports.

The new program, called area navigation and made possible by better computerized navigation equipment, would gradually replace a system that restricts airplanes to narrow routes between navigation stations, in effect making them fly dogleg paths from one radio beacon to the next.

It would allow them to fly through vast areas now unuseable because they are not directly between radio beacons.

In a notice of proposed rulemaking last week, the FAA set out its plan to establish new area navigation routes, or multiple flight paths. Instead of flying from beacon to beacon, airplanes would, in effect, beable to generate their own phantom beacons in a straighter line.

William M. Flener, chief of the FAA's air traffic service, said the agency has a broad development program aimed at putting area navigation equipment into use as rapidly as possible.

"Area navigation gives us a chance to relieve some of the current air congestion on heavily traveled routes and provide better service to the air traveler," he said.

In the early years of aviation pilots followed light beacons, effective only when visibility was good. They gave way to the low frequency radio, which gave courses in four directions from each station.

In the early 1960s a more reliable method of radio navigation came along—the very high frequency stations that provided pilots with courses over a full range of 360 degrees instead of the old four-beam technique.

Hundreds of Cubans Enter U.S. Illegally

MIAMI (AP) — By boat, barrel and bravado, hundreds of Cubans are illegally entering the United States from Mexico.

About 500 are known to have crossed the border at points from Texas to Arizona during the first four months of 1969. Concerned U.S. officials have stepped up enforcement, and at the same time loosened other regulations, in a bid to stem the tide. They think they're succeeding.

A change last year in immigration law has spurred the illegal entries by lengthening the time Cubans who try to come legally from Mexico must wait for a visa.

The law imposed a 120,000-person annual limit on the number of immigrants who can come to the United States annually from other western hemisphere nations. Previously there was no limit.

The rate of legal Cuban immigration has dropped by more than 80 per cent in the last year, but this does not include the more than 2,000 Cubans a month who come on direct refugee flights from Havana.

Most Cubans get to Mexico City legally. But once there, they are faced with the increasing delays plus the problem of paying living costs while being prohibited by the Mexican government from working. Some are quick to accept offers of help in crossing the border.

One Cuban woman recalled her stay in Mexico City with her two daughters: "In the hotel some Cuban asked me if we want to cross the border. I said 'Yes.' We moved to the border in a bus. There, we went to a hotel and a Mexican came to the group and he says, 'you are Mrs. ...' I said, 'Yes, I am.'"

Then, after paying $600, the mother and daughters were escorted to a hole in the fence at the border town of Nogales, Ariz., and stepped through it at noon on a dark, rainy day.

The trip was more laden with intrigue for a former Cuban dentist who first had to buy his way out of a Cuban prison where he was serving time for currency violations. The dentist, like other Cubans questioned about their border crossings, asked to remain anonymous.

He said he made his smuggling arrangements days after arriving in Mexico City, but it was six weeks before he got into the United States.

He traveled with five other persons in a chauffer-driven new car to Monterrey, Mexico, was hidden in a motel until night and then was taken by the same driver—this time in an old car—to a farm near the border.

The group met a young man and an old man under a tree, were led single file 400 yards to the Rio Grande and were ferried across two at a time on a wood and canvas raft which had been hidden nearby. The cost to the dentist: $300.

Once inside the United States, the Cubans are safe because they cannot be deported to Mexico and are not sent back to Cuba. But the government is increasingly refusing entry to any who are caught or turn themselves in right at the border.

During April, when officials said 175 Cubans were known to enter illegally, 31 others were turned back. One woman who was turned back said she succeeded in getting across two weeks later, hidden in a lard barrel.

Immigration Service Officials said nearly all the illegal entrants turn themselves in once they are well past the border since no penalties are imposed and they are allowed to remain in the United States.

The service also has eased regulations to make it easier for Cubans in Mexico City to skirt immigration quotas if they can prove they have relatives already in the United States.

Hijackers Report Cuban Imprisonment

HAVANA (AP) — An American Black Panther said today he and other members of his party have been "isolated and imprisoned" in Cuba and they want to leave. He implied that Panther leader Eldridge Cleaver is among the discontented.

Raymond Johnson, 22, of Alexandria, Va., told a newsman he was instructed by a highranking Panther in Cuba to report this feeling.

Johnson, who described himself as a lieutenant in the Black Panther movement and an airliner hijacker, said: "The Panthers have not been received in a revolutionary fashion. We have been condemned to live in Cuba."

He added that members of the black militant organization had been imprisoned, isolated, banned from Havana and told they could not organize their party in Cuba.

"These imprisonments amount to more than just being confined for a period of investigation," Johnson said.

"Some have been imprisoned a second time. They have been sent to completely isolated sections of the island and forced to work in labor camps."

Johnson said he expected to be arrested at any time, adding: "It is possible some of the Panthers will be arrested today."

The Panther said arrests "always come when they (the Panthers) become disenchanted and after they protest conditions and express a desire to leave the country."

"We would like this information to reach the Black Panther party in the United States so the party will know the unrevolutionary way we are being treated," he said. "We want them to protest at Cuban missions everywhere."

The only Cuban mission in the United States is at the United Nations.

Johnson said he was jailed for 21 days after he hijacked a National Airlines jet from New Orleans to Havana on Nov. 4, 1968.

Johnson claimed that some Panthers who have talked black culture to Cubans have been branded counterrevolutionaries, one of communism's most serious crimes.

He said most of the Panthers would like to go to Africa, but they have been told not to contact African embassies in Havana.

Johnson also said Omar Talif, a party member from New York, and his American wife and child "disappeared" after being told by Cuban officials they were "black racists."

Johnson said he did not know how many Black Panthers currently are in Cuba but he identified four:

Byron Muse Booth of Los Angeles, Calif., deputy minister of defense; Earl Farrow of Denver, Colo., deputy minister of information; Charles Rhaim Smith of Los Angeles, and Lt. James Akili and his wife of New York.

Johnson said all the Panthers he knows have requested permission to leave Cuba. He turned aside questions about Cleaver on security grounds, but added: "An exceedingly high-ranking Black Panther officer doesn't like the treatment of black revolutionaries and the Black Panthers here at all."

In Miami, the FBI said Johnson was one of the more "vicious" of the hijackers.

"He called the passengers 'economic devils' and stood over the captain throughout the flight, continually hitting him over the head with a cocked .38 revolver," an FBI agent said.

"He knocked the copilot's glasses off and ground them under his heel."

Johnson was a fugitive from an arson charge at Baton Rouge, La., when he hijacked the plane. Earlier, he had been charged there with criminal mischief and criminal trespass. On the latter charge, he was given a one-year suspended sentence.

He recently was indicted in New Orleans on charges of aerial piracy and kidnaping.

TV to Beef Up Children Shows

NEW YORK (AP) — The past television season was one in which the commercial networks set out to bring original "meaningful drama" to the adult audience. Next season, it appears, will be the one in which they will share the wealth with the child viewers.

CBS already has announced plans for seven special programs, each an original with a sizeable budget. CBS, which set up a two "Children's Hour" as a sort of offset of "CBS Playhouse" announced Monday details for three Saturday morning specials and they may even be one more if suitable original material can be found.

By now it is well established that Saturday morning on the networks is kiddy time. For a considerable period, each of the three networks filled the hours with solid blocks of cartoons—mostly old short subjects originally made for theaters and only recently with new animated programs.

The generally shoddy quality of those old TV programs for children has been increasingly a matter of criticism. It is logical to presume that current network efforts to upgrade the broadcasts is a response to the criticism.

Network executives prefer, however, to say "it was just something that we felt should be done," or that it has become important to "correct the balance of programming."

Whatever the reason, there has been, at least by CBS and NBC, a marked change in the type of shows seen by upwards of 15 million children up to the age of 13 who watch television Saturday mornings.

By next season, NBC's morning lineup will lean heavily on fantasy. CBS will go in, as it has this season, for comedy. Not long ago, the cartoons that were run and rerun were in that category euphemistically called "adventure," but they were criticized for their violence.

One Saturday morning last March, an estimated 14 million television sets were tuned to stations affiliated with one or another of three networks. CBS's "Archie" and NBC's rerun of "The Flintstones" were competing with ABC's "Spiderman" for attention.

That represents a lot of children, even if there had been only one child watching each set. It adds up to an audience discovered long ago by manufacturers of such products as toys, cereals, candy, peanut butter and dairy products.

Kennedy Has Quiet Trip In Mind

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy is planning a quiet look at Europe this summer, avoiding meeting heads of state who might want to talk with a potential presidential candidate.

Kennedy, the Senate's No. 2 Democratic Leader, expects to take advantage of the August congressional recess for his trip. But he wants none of the fanfare which marked the last trip of his late brother, Robert F. Kennedy, to European capitals.

This trip also promises to contrast sharply with the European tour which Former Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, is on now.

Humphrey the 1968 Democratic presidential candidate and a potential nominee in 1972, will visit England, Denmark, Finland, Switzerland as well as spending a week in Russia. He will make public appearances and may confer with Kremlin leaders.

Kennedy's journey will be made as quietly as circumstances permit as part of an effort to lower the sound level of speculation about his political future.

It is Kennedy's judgment that it is entirely too soon to make any calculation about what is going to happen three years from now. He recognizes, for example, that events—particularly a settlement in Vietnam—could make President Nixon all but unbeatable.

At 37 the Massachusetts senator is young enough and politically cautious enough to wait if 1972 looks like a bad year for the Democratic nominee.

There also is the intervening matter of getting re-elected to the Senate next year. Nobody expects any real difficulty but Kennedy's decision to stick closely to Senate business this year indicates he intends to take no chances.

Despite efforts to reduce the decibels of personal publicity, Kennedy is finding it difficult to fend off hundreds of proposals to put his views in print and his face on television.

All this doesn't mean Kennedy is retiring to cloister. He is speaking out on such subjects as the draft, aid for ghetto residents and Vietnam refugees.

With the exception of his blast about Hamburger Hill and the level of American offensive actions, he has been cautious about Vietnam.

HEW Bids to Curb Rise In Medicaid Fees

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Health, Education and Welfare issued new regulations today aimed at putting a lid on the sharp rises in fees paid to doctors, dentists and other individuals under Medicaid.

Secretary Robert H. Finch said the regulations would take effect in 30 days.

They would establish the first federal standard for fees under medicaid, the state-administered program of health care for the poor. The program has come under fire for skyrocketing costs and charges of abuse and fraud.

Basically, the complex and technical regulations say fees must be based on what 75 out of every 100 doctors in a given area were charging under medicaid in January 1969. This is referred to in the announcement as "the 75th percentile of customary charges."

States now basing their fees on a lower percentile—on what fewer doctors charge—can raise the standard. States where it is higher must come down only if their standard is greater than the 83rd percentile.

The regulations pertaining only to fees expires July 1, 1970 and Finch said states will be allowed to increase fees only if two conditions are met.

Consumption of distilled spirits in the United States in 1965 reached a high of 292,987,572 gallons, an average of 1.53 gallons per person.

Ike's Burial Turns Abilene Into Tourist Attraction

ABILENE, Kan. (AP)—It's a bit staggering — what the burial of former President Dwight D. Eisenhower has done to his home town.

With the summer tourist rush in full swing, the crowds some days outnumber the population. Traffic has been so heavy the city hasn't been able to repave and widen a main avenue most used by visitors.

They're coming by the thousands to Abilene where Ike is buried — orderly crowds of solemn, silent and respectful people of all ages from all over the United States and many foreign countries.

"This has created some rather unique new problems, however," agreed City Manager Kenneth Bittel.

He explained the city delayed a key street paving job through the "busy" months.

"But it's beginning to look like they are all going to be busy months," he added.

Besides the regular tourist business, the Eisenhower Center is bringing in many historians, researchers, writers, scholars and others for special seminars and longer periods of work and study.

One example was the D-Day 25th anniversary conference earlier this month, bringing more than 200 VIP's from this country and Europe. Speakers included a general who served with Eisenhower and a retired German general who declared there was mass confusion on the Nazi side when Allied troops stormed ashore in France.

From the day of the funeral, sleeping and catering to demands of people looking for mementos and souvenirs.

Abilene stores and shops find it nearly impossible, for example, to keep up with the demand for Eisenhower postcards. Motels are filled up for miles around.

But for its size, Abilene has had a lot of experience hosting dignitaries and large crowds while its most famous son was still alive. And its history of meeting situations dates back to the colorful end of the Chisholm Trail cattle days when it was known as the wildest town on the Western frontier.

"This was created some rather unique new problems, however," agreed City Manager Kenneth Bittel.

He explained the city delayed a key street paving job through the "busy" months.

"But it's beginning to look like they are all going to be busy months," he added.

Besides the regular tourist business, the Eisenhower Center is bringing in many historians, researchers, writers, scholars and others for special seminars and longer periods of work and study.

One example was the D-Day 25th anniversary conference earlier this month, bringing more than 200 VIP's from this country and Europe. Speakers included a general who served with Eisenhower and a retired German general who declared there was mass confusion on the Nazi side when Allied troops stormed ashore in France.

From the day of the funeral, when some children unthinkingly stripped flowers from outdoor decorations and carried them inside to place on the crypt, young people have visited the chapel in large numbers.

"They don't all come just because they happen to be with their parents," said one guard. "They show a surprising knowledge and interest in the Eisenhower story."

One little girl left a handmade wreath of flowers at the altar with a note which read: "In grateful memory of a great man, our former President and General (Ike) Eisenhower."

Mrs. Mamie Eisenhower, the general's widow, has said she plans to visit Abilene this fall for the first time since the funeral.

Plans also are shaping up for issuance of a "first day" Eisenhower stamp in Abilene on his birthday anniversary Oct. 14. It will go on sale here a day ahead of the rest of the country and Postmaster Henry Smith says advance orders already are being received in large numbers.

Work also is to begin this fall on doubling the size of the Eisenhower Museum to house an ever-increasing number of displays. There already are 7,000 items to see.

While the heaviest traffic is through the burial chapel, a high percentage of visitors also go through the library and museum. Long queues forming outside the buildings on weekends are not unusual.

"This is one of our finest things, historically," Dr. Wickman said. "It is the original house on the original site, with furniture from the period of Mr. Eisenhower's mother."

But the house was never arranged for a lot of people marching through it. The building has been strengthened, but the halls are narrow, the rooms small and the stairway steep.

Soaring Sixties Pare 19 Cents off Dollar

NEW YORK (AP) — For the 21th straight month, the consumer price index has continued to rise, and now something like 8 cents has been pared from the dollar bill during the Soaring Sixties.

The dollar has been pared, in fact, like a big potato, and now you have to toss in a lot more of them to make the same stew.

This is the calamity of the great, 100-month world economic climb. At its beginning almost every American benefited, but now the average family is only keeping even, despite his hefty pay raises.

Labor Department statistics confirm the dollar squeeze of people that they are astride a wave going nowhere. The weekly purchasing power of an average worker with three dependents was $78.22 in May. A year earlier it was $78.47.

One effect of the declining dollar value is to produce the husband-wife squabbles all over the country, with the husband refusing to believe that his hard work produces so few groceries.

The disputes are likely to get more adamant, experts say, as the more recent increases are especially noticable. Meat prices, for example, are rising, and American families love meat, consuming more than 35 billion pounds a year.

Inflation alone is not the only villain in the dollar's disappearing act. There has been an explosion of taxes in America and also in Europe, for example, by states for highways, by the federal government for various commitments.

What have the increases in living costs been like? Let us assume that in 1960 the dollar was worth 100 cents. Perhaps it really wasn't worth that compared with 1940, for example, but let us make the assumption.

In 1961 that value of 100 cents was down 1.1 per cent to 98.9. The same loss was recorded in 1962, dropping the value to 97.8 cents compared with 1960.

The fall continued in 1963, but at about the same relatively slow rate, and by the end of the year the dollar bought 96.8 per cent of the goods and services it would have bought in 1960. Another 1.7 cent drop in 1964 reduced the value to 95.1.

These decreases were hardly anything to worry about. They were, in fact, among the lowest rates for any country in the industrialized world. They reflected stability rather than dangerous inflation.

But then inflation did set in, and it cannot be ignored that it dug itself into the economy at the very time the country was digging itself into Vietnam. Military costs were a significant contributor.

An acceleration in the decline first became noticeable in 1965, when 1.6 cents was shaved from the dollar. In the following year the loss jumped to 2.6 cents. By the end of 1967 another 1.8 per cent was lost and the dollar read 92.5.

The decline rose to a whopping 3.6 cents last year, and the dollar closed the year with a reading of only 85.8 cents compared with 1960.

Through the first quarter of 1969 the loss was the sharpest for any similar period in the Soaring Sixties, amounting to 2.4 cents and dropping the dollar to 83.4 cents.

When the figures for the three months ending with June are compiled, very likely they will show a similar amount lost.

This is not a comforting story, but don't forget either: That dollar still is the envy of hundreds of millions of people throughout the world, many of whom would be happy to have dollars worth only 50 per cent of the 1960 value.

Tight Money Trims Price Of Lumber

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lumber prices have ceased to be a major headache to homebuilders. Now they're a headache to lumbermen.

The sky-high lumber prices of a few months ago, which weren't even joggled by public and Congressional outcries, have succumbed to the tight money squeeze.

High mortgage interest costs have depressed the housing outlook and sent most lumber purchasers to less than half their February level. The lumber industry fears the set-back will halt the progress of legislation aimed at taking the roller-coaster effect out of lumber prices.

"If the housing start situation improves, I think we will see a frightening increases in wood product prices," Ernest J. Hodgins, president of the American Forest Institute predicted in an interview.

A typical plywood item, quarter-inch interior sanded plywood, plunged from $144 per thousand square feet, in February to $62 in early June, he said.

But the cost of the raw material—from national forests, where most of the nation's softwood timber stands—rose 126 per cent last year and remains high.

"As a result many mills have closed their doors and cannot reopen them until more timber becomes available, regardless of how the housing market moves," Hodges said.

The recent increase in the prime bank interest rate was bad news for housing, which already had suffered a four-month decline blamed on high mortgage interest rates. Private new-home starts skidded in May to an annual rate of 1.5 million, compared with nearly 1.9 million in January.

Both rates fell far short of the 10-year goal of 2.6 million starts annually, posted by the Housing Act of 1968.

That cannot possibly be met if mortgage rates stay up, housing men agree. And when and if interest rates come down, the respite for homebuilders and homebuyers may be brief. A housing recovery almost inevitably will send lumber costs soaring again.

Shortages of timber are almost immediately translated into price increases because the government lets its contracts to private operators for cutting on public lands by bidding.

The Nixon administration took several stopgap steps to improve timber supplies when lumber prices went into orbit early this year, but the industry is staking its hopes for improved long-term price stability on the National Forest Timber Supply bill.

This would earmark receipts from timber sales to improve access roads and otherwise increase the output from national forests, while protecting the forest reserves.

Though the important result for consumers and homebuyers would be to eliminate extreme lumber price upswings, the lumber industry is united in the bill's support.

A-Frame of Aluminum

ALUMINUM LEISURE HOME was unveiled in Chicago. Constructed of curved aluminum panels, it is a two-story building that will serve as a vacation, retirement or second home.

CHICAGO (AP) — An "A" frame type home designed for leisure living was unveiled exterior aluminum panels.

Peter S. Pedersen Jr., president of Leisure Home Corporation of America, said the expandable system of adding modular units starts with a standard-size home 32 feet by 18 and 16 feet high. It will sell unfurnished for about $6,000, to $8,000.

The principal advantages of the home, aside from the low cost, are the elimination of expensive maintenance problems and maximum resistance to fire, rot, termites and moth-millers.

Designed for summer homes, ski lodges and retirement living, the aluminum home rests on a foundation slab of concrete or a wooden base.

A two-story unit permits two to four bedrooms and a variety of floor plans.

Credit Card Evils

Will the banking community correct credit card evils, or must Washington do it?

That warning question clearly emerged from recent hearings of Sen. William Proxmire's subcommittee. Bankers will be wise to answer it by swiftly cleaning their own house.

An estimated 15 to 20 million people now hold bank credit cards. The most common - and the most valid - objection is that many cards have bone, unsought, to those unable to handle easy credit.

"I am greatly troubled with the ethics of forcing unsolicited and unwanted credit cards into the consumer's home," testified Betty Furness, LBJ's consumer guardian.

Equally concerned is Royal E. Jackson, chief bankruptcy officer for federal lcourts. Jackson says easy credit is "undoubtedly" one reason why personal bankruptcies have risen steadwly - to a disturbing 181,194 last year.

A flagrant - if untypical - example was the Tennessean, an ex-journalist, who armed himself with credit cards, went on an extensive world tour, ran up overseas bills totaling $13,587, then came home and delcared himself bankrupt.

Many consider another evil to be the undue imposition of liability upon card holders.

Some Congressional witnesses cited cases of people held accountable for purchases on credit cards they never received, or for purchases made after the cards were reported stolen.

Andrew F. Billmer, Federal Reserve Board member, countered with this statement.

"Banks generally appear to follow the practice of absorbing 11 fraud losses before the customer accepts the card. In addition, a substantial proportion of banks absorb losses after the card-holder accepts the card, although the card-holder is not usually informed of this policy."

While it opposes legislative regulation or restraint, the FRB does seem unsolicited credit card mailings "objectionable." Miss Furness uses stronger terms, deploring the willy-nilly handing out of "laminated liability."

In 1968, Congress merely explored - but if credit card systems are not improved, federal legislation is likely to be offered next year.

Senator Proxmire has said much more must be done to place liability for credit-card losses or thefts on the issuer, to screen credit ratings of recipients more carefully and responsibly, and to curtail unsolicited mailings.

These are good guidelines for self-purging.

Americans hoping that their federal bureaucracy will become wiser with age can take little consolation in the plight of one British borough. The residents of a subdivision are suffering the pangs of a bewildering "pace system" for street addresses dreamed up by the borough planners.

Postmen, milkmen, grocerymen and laundrymen are finding no end to their troubles of making deliveries to houses designated by their distances from certain intersections. The system locates each house by "paces" rather than the old number system.

The problem, according to one deliveryman, is that no one has revealed just where the pacing should begin. And, the paces have to be exactly one meter (39.37 inches) in length or the whole system breaks down. The shorter deliverymen obviously are at a disadvantage from the beginning.

In a typically bureaucratic manner, however, the planners arre not deterred. lThey're moving ahead with plans to convert every street in the borrough to the pace system.

Bureaucracies, it seems, just get sillier, rather than wiser, with age.

The Nine-Story Yo-Yo

Thirteen-year-old Anthony Cahan may not have made the greatest scientific discovery since Issac Newton took an apple on his noggin, but Anthony's feat will be admired by many a schoolboy, past and present.

Young Anthony, a student at a private school in New York, built wihat his headmaster described as the largest yo-yo in the world and successfully retrieved it a after a nine-story thrust. Faculty members had bet it couldn't be done.

Yo-yomanship is an ancient art, dating back at least to the 1930s, when small boys and girls on their way home from school would get entangled with the latest models of the fascinating toys.

There were small, chubby wooden yo-yos, flat metal yo-yos and sleek, brightly painted yo-yos. In those days kids dropped into corner stores to buy yo-yos, not marijuana and switchblades.

Perhaps Anthony will start a trend back to peaceful pursuits by students. Certainly his accomplishment is a refreshing change of pace from the destructive antics of the human yo-yos on so many college campuses.

Fish Die In Pond

BLODGETT -- The heavy use of water for irrigation is blamed for the loss of about 50 large catfish and bass due to lack of oxygen in a one-fourth acre pond on the property of Byron Wyman of Blodgett.

"My pond has been going dry for the past month, due to lack of rain and the fact that the 19-foot water table, which fed water into the pond, has been lowered by the use of water for irrigation on fields in the vicinity," Wyman explained.

He said that several youths garnered "some three dozen catfish from the pond Sunday, but I don't know whether they lived or not. All I can do now is to hope it will come a big rain and add oxygen to the pond so that many other fish I know are in the pond won't be killed," he added.

The pond is located some eight miles from Sikeston on the Blodgett road, just South of where the overpass passes over I-55.

Some of the catfish would weigh in at around 10 pounds each.

Two Injured In Four-Car Accident

Two persons were injured in a four-car accident yesterday two miles east of Wyatt on Highway 60, the Highway Patrol reported today.

Seriously injured is Carl Howard, 41, Lynnvelle, Ky., and critically injured is William Thompson, 76, Big Sandy, Tenn.

Howard is at St. Mary's Hospital at Cairo, Ill., and Thompson is at Missouri Delta Community Hospital in Sikeston.

The accident occurred when a 1967 Chevrolet sedan, driven by Eris Mae, route three, Charleston, slowed down to make a left turn off of Highway 60. Mae was traveling east.

Thompson, driving behind Mae, slowed down his 1960 Buick Sedan to allow Mae to turn.

Francisco Dealejandro, 56, was driving a 1960 Dodge Van Truck behind Thompson. Dealejandro's truck ran into the Buick driven by Thompson causing Thompson's Buick to hit the Chevrolet driven by Mae.

When the Chevrolet was hit, it went crossways into the road and was hit by a 1969 Plymmouth driven by Howard, who was traveling west.

Dealejandro was arrested for following too closely.

Braden Heads Lions Club

CHARLESTON -- Leonard Braden, a salesman for Simmons Equipment Co., Charleston, was elevated from vice-president to the president of the Charleston Lions Club here last night at the annual officer installation meeting.

He succeeds George Roberts, manager of the Mississippi County ASC office. Sheriff W. J. "Pedro" Simmons, named "Lions Man of the Year for 1969" installed the officers.

Other officers installed included Tom Wells, first vice-president; Joseph Reeves, second vice-president; H. R. Hequemborg, secretary-treasurer; Herbert Marshall, tail twister, and W. S. Babb, first assistant tail twister and Elbert Waide, Lions farmer.

New members of the board of directors include O. T. Dalton, Larry Long and Dennis Quertermous.

The Lions had a barbecue supper, at the Charleston Country Club as they also celebrated "Ladies Night."

Incoming President Braden suggested that more "Ladies Nights" be held, since it seemed that attendance always picked up when the ladies were invited to attend the meetings.

Announced as winners of "perfect attendance pins" from Lions International for their perfect attendance record, during the past year, were: J. Abner Beck, H. R. Hequemborg, J. H. Marshall and George Roberts.

Rogers Says Combat Lull May Speed Troop Recalls

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State William P. Rogers said today that battle activity in Vietnam in the last week may have dropped to the lowest level of the war and he indicated this could increase U.S. troop withdrawals if the lull continues.

Rogers also told a news conference that "we know pretty conclusively" that the infiltration of North Vietnamese troops into South Vietnam has declined in the last two or three months but the reason for this is not not clear.

Rogers cautioned that the reason for the battlefield lull is not yet quite clear either, saying more time would be required to decide whether it was politically significant.

He said, however, that "we hope this is a response to the announcement by President Nixon and President Thieu of South Vietnam at Midway." The Midway announcement June 8 disclosed Nixon's decision to withdraw 25,000 American troops by the end of August.

One question asked Rogers was whether the United States would react to the lower level of combat now apparent, assuming that it proved to be significant.

He recalled that one of Presiden Nixon's stated criteria for withdrawing forces from Vietnam was the level of enemy military activity in the field.

"Obviously if the level of hostility continues and it is significantly lower," Rogers said, "that would effect our decisions on further troop replacements withdrawals."

At another point he said, "If the rate of combat falls off to a very small level obviously our plans will change."

Rogers was questioned about whether the Nixon administration was studying proposals for a cease- fire in Vietnam. He said a cease- fire did not appear to be practical in the absence of an agreement on troop withdrawal on both sides which, he argued, would automatically lower the level of combat.

He was then asked whether even if the enemy reduced combat activity the United States would, as the questioner said, keep the pressure on.

"If we find the other side if not fighting as they have been," Rogers said on this issue, "We'll have to review our military position."

Rogers said he had talked with Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird immediately before going into the news conference.

He said: "He told me that last week we had the lowest level in combat activity in Vietnam in a long time-possibly during the whole war."

"We don't know the meaning of this," Rogers said.

Attempt to Salvage Ship

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A spokesman for the Santa Maria Corp., said an attempt would be made to salvage the 80-foot replica of Columbus' famous flagship which broke away from its moorings during a weekend storm, drifted two miles and sank.

"Our report indicates that the ship can be saved," Anthony F. Sansone said. "We intend to make every effort to expedite saving her." Sansone said divers would begin removing artifacts from the Spanish-built tourist attraction formerly exhibited at the New York World's Fair.

"We've had many calls from people who wanted to know if the Santa Maria could be saved and offering help. The people have been great and we are going to do everything we can to bring the ship back for them."

Preliminary Sewer Plans at Miner

MINER -- The Miner Board of Trustees did not take action last night on a liquor by the drink ordinance. The ordinance remains to be finalized by the city's attorney, Tom Arnold. A special meeting probably will be called next week regarding the ordinance.

In last night's meeting, City Clerk Mrs. Anna Lewis reported June tax collections of $1,091, which included a $566 franchise tax payment from Missouri Utilities.

A preliminary study regarding a sewage system for the city is underway to determine costs and needs. A meeting will be held with officials of the Department of Housing and Urban Development. A 50 per cent grant is under consideration.

It was also announced the State Department of Health will make its final inspection Monday of the city's new water system.

East Prairie City Manager Issue Narrowly Approved

BY SHIRLEY PRITCHETT

EAST PRAIRIE -- East Prairie voters voted in a change in government here yesterday. Final returns showed a 26-vote majority for the change to city manager form of government from mayor-alderman.

With a great deal of aid from Ward, where sponsors of the city manager operation voted 321 to 268 for its adoption, the final results showed 469 favoring the change and 443 voting for retention of the present system. About 20 absentee votes remain to be counted, but their count cannot change the final results.

The change came after voters had been deluged with claims of superiority from both sides. The city manager sponsors, including the mayor and aldermen, the Chamber of Commerce and the various civic clubs had vied with their opponents, mostly the more elderly residents who thought they couldn't afford a city manager. Hot words were passed back and forth and many families split their votes, according to reports.

The campaign to gain a city manager was initiated during graduation ceremonies at the high school when Mayor Lloyd Hogan, who favored city managership, said East Prairie is "the only town in the nation where you take a bath and get dirtier." He was referring to the dire need for updating the city's water and sewerage systems.

With a city manager the mayor and city council will still determine expenditures. The city manager is expected to be paid a minimum of $7,500 per year plus expenses. The city manager is expected to be found outside East Prairie, since Mayor Hogan says he doesn't believe "any of our citizens wants the job, or is qualified for it."

The mayor was congratulated by Joe Webb, president of the East Prairie Chamber of Commerce shortly after the official count was announced and then a host of workers for the new form of government visited with Hogan, who said simply:

"I'm out of an administrative job at last, and I'm glad of it. With a hard working city manager, who has time to devote to this job, I'm sure that East Prairie will soon be in a position to offer prospective manufacturing concerns just the right setup that will gain us additional industry." A garment plant and another small muffler plant is presently located in East Prairie.

The mayor said a meeting probably will be held Thursday or Friday night to establish a list of candidates for the city manager's position.

"We must all pull together now to make East Prairie the best town in the Bootheel area," the mayor pleaded.

The interest was shown in the fact that a total of 932 of a possible 947 qualified voters turned out to cast their ballots, the largest turnout percentage wise in the town's history.

Voting was held at the City Hall and at the Lions Club building for Wards One and Two. Presiding at Ward One were Mrs. John Griffin and Mrs. Mary Ann Parker as managers and Mrs. Ernest McMikle and Mrs. Bernice Anthony as clerks. In Ward Two Mrs. Evelyn Denton and Mrs. Grace Emory served as judges and Mrs. Nina Hunter and Mrs. Franklin Morris as clerks.

Man Escapes Briefly From Mississippi County Jail

From Charleston Bureau of the Daily Standard

By PEGGY GRISSOM
STAFF WRITER

CHARLESTON — A 19-year-old St. Louis man, armed with a .22 caliber pistol, escaped briefly this morning from the Mississippi County Jail, Sheriff W. J. "Pedro" Simmons reported. Leonard Truman Wendell, who was being held on a bad check charge, escaped about 10:30 p.m. and was captured about 30 minutes later by Charleston police about one-half mile from the jail.

Wendell had requested Deputy Gordon Galemore to come up to his cell regarding some clothes. He pulled the pistol on Galemore and placed him in the cell. Wendell then threatened a jail trustee, Bob Bonta, whom he had encountered in a hallway.

Wendell then proceeded to Sheriff Simmon's office where the sheriff was talking with two visitors, James and Elmer Hall. He pulled the gun on the trio. Simmons tried to talk Wendell into surrendering the gun to him, but Wendell ordered Sheriff Simmons and his two visitors to go to the cell block. Simmons said he left the office and locked the door to his office as he left. Simmons then called Charleston City Police to alert them to set up road blocks throughout the city.

Meanwhile Wendell left Simmons' office, going into a lot behind the IGA Store immediately in front of the jail. He finally emerged on Green Street from Commercial, Simmons said.

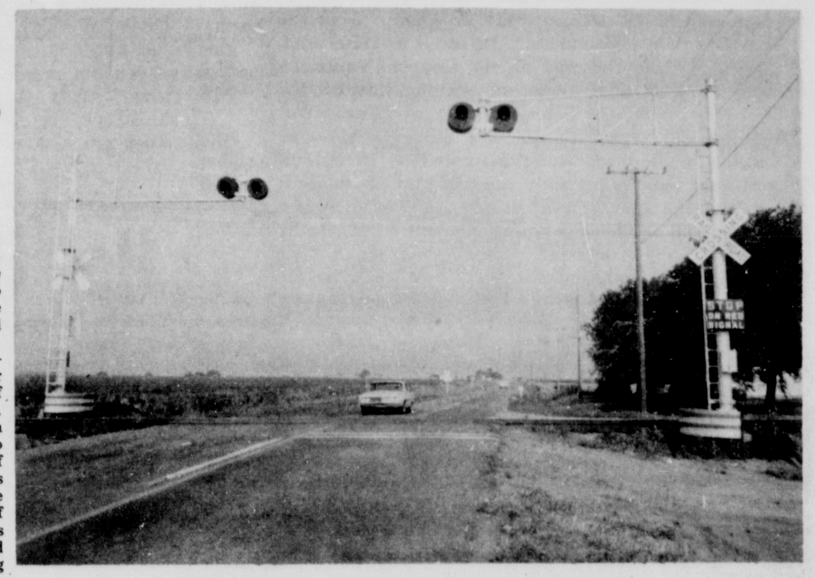
City Policeman Glenn Hornbeck spotted Wendell going down Green, but Wendell saw the officer about the same time and ducked behind a car parked behind the Economy Furniture Store on Green Street.

What then could have been a shootout failed to materialize as Wendell, after pulling his pistol on Officer Hornbeck, had second thoughts and meekly surrendered when Hornback started to "pull down" on the escapee with his service revolver.

Sheriff Simmons said that charges will be filed against the escapee and could cover more than one charge.

The sheriff said he expected to announce the name and arrest of an accomplace who Simmons said passed the .22 caliber gun to Wendell yesterday when Wendell received a quart of milk between 1 p.m. and 2 p.m.

"We know that the gun was sneaked into Wendell by a visitor who delivered the milk to him," Simmons explained.



FLASHING LIGHT SIGNALS estimated to cost $12,000 have been installed at the railroad crossing on Salcedo Road. For the Missouri Public Service Commission to order such a light, one or more conditions must exist, trains speeds should exceed 60 miles per hour, railroad and highway traffic should exceed 1,200 vehicles per day, at least one train should pass through per day or restricted visibility should exist. The highway department paid 90 per cent of the cost and the railroad paid 10 per cent.

Interstate Safety Program Announced for Next Year

Survey parties have begun compiling data for a Safety Modification Program which will begin on Interstate 55 and 57 near the first of the year, William H. Shaw, executive engineer, District 10 Highway Department, said today.

The program will cause workmen to change guard rails, signs and medium obstructions so the devices will comply with traffic rules, hich have recently gone into effect.

Guard rails will be modified so the end of them will curve down and be fastened to the ground. They are presently curved out toward the highway and are easily sent through automobiles during accidents.

With the rails fastened downward to the ground, they will be less likely to cut through an automobile in case of an accident.

The drainage devices used now will be removed and flush grates will be installed.

Also, highway signs will be moved to different positions to assure more safety.

The Safety Modification Program was set up by the federal Bureau of Public Roads and adopted by the Missouri State Highway Commission.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!
RUBBER STAMP?

Congress has more power to curb the Supreme Court than it has used. Confirmation has been a "rubber stamp," and the power of impeachment has never been used on a Supreme Court justice.

The Constitution provides another avenue of relief, which Congress could take by simple legislation: Article III, Section 2, establishes authority for Congress to limit jurisdiction of the court in any field it chooses. In effect, Congress could say to the court: you shall not adjudicate in the fields we have designated.

In some cases, Congress can overcome the effect of particular decisions by statutory enactment, expecially when spelling out the intent of Congress. Also, in the opinion of many constitutional lawyers, Congress could, by simple statute, establish an age limit for mandatory retirement. Such a limit would not necessarily affect the court's philosophy, but it would open up fresh opportunities for control by confirmation.

Other controls would require constitutional amendments. One such amendment could set additional qualifications for Supreme Court justices, such as a requirement that candidates have had at least five years service in the highest trial court in a state or on a court with appellate jurisdiction. This would limit membership on the Supreme Court to experienced judge event purely political appointments.

Constitutional amendments also would be required to limit the term to a set period or to require periodic reconfirmation of justices. Constitutional amendments can also be drawn to protect specific rights, such as ine fields of school prayer or legislative apportionment.

Rear-end highway collisions between cars and farm machinery declined 32 per cent in Michigan during the first year the state adopted a law requiring use of the triangular Show - Moving Vehicle emblem, despite the fact that the law was in effect for only the last nine months of that year, 1967.

This is the finding of a recent study conducted by the Agricultural Engineering department of Michigan State University. The report concludes that "use of the SMV emblem will significantly reduce such rear-end collisions on public highways."

The triangular emblem, 16 inches on a side, has a red reflective border that shines brightly in the headlights of oncoming cars at night and an orange fluorescent center for daytime visibility. Adopting its SMV law last year. Michigan became one of 10 states having such legislation involving vehicles designed to travel no faster than 25 m.p.h. on the highway.

The MSU study used data from Michigan State Police records listing 133 rear-end collisions involving automobiles and farm machinery during 1966. In all cases, the cars hit the machinery while the latter was either moving straight ahead or was stopped on the highway. Last year, however, only 89 such accidents occurred – a reduction of 32 per cent.

The emblem was developed after three years of research at Ohio State University on a grant from the Automotive Safety Foundation. Its use is recommended by the ASF, the National Safety Council, American Society of Agricultural Engineers, National Institute for Farm Safety, National Safety League of Canada and many other such organizations.

Studies show there are a minimum of 12 million slow-moving vehicles regularly operating on the nation's highways. In a typical year, they're involved in nearly 8,000 rear-end accidents resulting in about 2,000 deaths and injuries.

The MSU study indicates that these tragic figures could be cut by at least a third if all states would require use of the SMV emblem.

The retail trade boom of 1967 will soar into 1968, extensions of private and government economists indicate.

Expectations of more business should be a prime factor in the planning of advertising budgets for the new year. The retailer who does not anticipate progress when allocating funds for advertising is likely to fall behind more dynamic competitors.

The first essential of effective advertising is a carefully planned budget. Too many retailers arbitrarily set aside a fixed sum from year to year to be spent haphazardly, without regard to seasonal demand or the effectiveness of various advertising media.

Poorly planned advertising may result in a shortage of funds when advertising is needed most. It may result in inconsistent and ineffective advertising. It may result in the expenditure of advertising funds for donations which do not contribute to sales.

Sloppy planning of advertising, or no planning at all, reflects a belief in a static economic situation. However, the retailer cannot live on a plateau. When consumer demand moves, the seller must also move or fall behind.

A good advertising budget uses past records as a guide only for evaluating anticipations of growth. It carefully spreads espenditures to reach the consumer during periods of peak demand. It firmly restricts advertising funds to legitimate advertising. Without regard to sentiment and pressure, the good advertising budget insures that the most efficient advertising media are used.

BILLY GRAHAM IN NEW YORK

Two summers ago, the Rev. Dr. Billy Graham undertook to persuade Swinging London to make a decision for Christ. It was then known that the evangelist planned a similar crusade in New York City in 1969 -- 12 years after his first eight-week crusade there. As always, Dr. Graham is true to his word. A 10-day crusade will open in Madison Square Garden on Friday, June 13.

Dr. Graham's 1969 crusade will be aimed at young people, who are more disillusioned with organized religion than are their elders. No less than 70 per cent of respondents to a recent (May 31) Gallup Poll stated that religion is losing its influence over life in the United States, while only 14 per cent thought it was increasing its influence. The results almost completely reversed those of a similar 1957 poll, in which 69 per cent of the respondents said they thought religion was increasing its influence on American life, and 14 per cent said they thought it was losing influence.

These results understate the feelings of younger people. Of the college - student respondents in the recent Gallup Poll, 78 per cent said they thought religion was losing ground. An earlier Gallup survey of 85 high school seniors and juniors in Westfield, N. J., found 90 per cent on the "losing influence" side. For his part, Dr. Graham says he has "practically given up on the older generation" but has "a lot of faith in young people searching for meaning and purpose in their lives."

Dr. Graham is viewed as a square by many young people, but no one question his integrity in a time when personal integrity is doubted. His squareness may even by an asset. John Corry, writing about Dr. Graham in HARPER'S (February 1969), notes that the evangelist was aware that hippies called their footwear "Jesus boots." Dr. Graham's conclusion, as reported by Corry: "Many psychologists say this reflects a longing for Jesus."

Smith Schippers passes along one about when Al Capp, creator of Li'l Abner, and then President Harry Truman met at the Mayflower in Washington. Capp was presented as "Mr. Capp, the comic strip creator."

"Which comic strip?" asked HT.

Mr. Truman then was introduced to Capp as the President.

"Which country?" asked Capp.

Which recalls a classic about Dexter Fellowes, the world's greatest press agent for the greatest show on Earth.

Dex blew into a newspaper office, as if Merle Evans' band had played him onto the scene, and proclaimed:

"The circus?" asked a heckling-type city editor.

"You should ask," countered Dex.

NEW YORK (AP) — The trouble with middle age is that most of the people undergoing it don't know how to relax and enjoy it.

They tend to regard it as teen-agers do acne—something they'd like to hide if they could. They see it as an affliction, not a blessing.

But every period of life has its advantages—yes, even middle age. For example, when you're middle-aged—

It is no longer really necessary to waste money buying alarm clocks. Your conscience will wake you up.

While every work day does get to feel like Monday, that means you look forward with five times as much eagerness toward Saturday and Sunday.

As there are fewer women older than you, there are fewer that you have to get up and yield your bus seat to.

It doesn't take you so long to comb your hair, and the time you save can be put to more constructive use.

Realizing she must conserve your waning energy, your wife is more willing to take the dog for a walk in bad weather. She may even pitch in and help shovel the snow off the driveway in winter.

As your diet no longer allows you to eat gravy, it becomes impossible for you to spill it on a new necktie.

Many people in the upper reaches of middle age no longer have to tire themselves out brushing their teeth. They can simply take them out and soak them in a glass overnight.

Who has to go to P-TA meetings? Other people, yes. You, no. Your fledglings have flown away.

Being able now to look at women more realistically and less romantically, you're surprised to find that many of them are really pretty nice people and actually not bad company.

Your children have reached an age where they are no longer ashamed of you—and you are no longer so afraid they'll wind up in jail.

The probability emerges that you will outlast the mortgage on your home after all.

Perhaps you've passed the point where you can look forward to a major promotion. On the other hand, you've been around so long that the boss would hesitate to fire you without thinking twice about it. And since thinking is hard work for your boss, he is unlikely to do it twice.

No longer do you stay at a cocktail party until after midnight. You have learned that the only important thing that happens at a party after midnight is trouble.

Yes, middle age can be downright pleasurable. The only way it could be improved would be for it to come about 25 years later in life, then last 25 years longer.

STRENGTHENING THE SYSTEM AMERICAN

One of the most successful and respected merchandising institutions in the nation is providing an outstanding example of the new progressivism of leading businessmen. In a special issue of Penney News, the Chairman of J.C. Penney Co., Mr. W.M. Batten, reveals his philosophy in a few words: "Equal treatment does not produce equal opportunity. It takes something more . . . . In business, there are times in everyone's career when he or she requires not only equal but special treatment. I look back on several occasions when businessmen went out of their way to give me special help. These were turning points of my career . . . In our families--don't we concentrate on the child who needs our help the most? This is to give him equal opportunity. Our action is based upon the need."

Other sections of the special issue of Penney News show how the company is carrying out with deeds of the philosophy of its Chairman. Under the JOBS Program, founded by the National Alliance of Businessmen, this retail distribution firm is now filling hundreds of positions with minority group members.

This is a lesson for all of us in the current drive to create more opportunities in private enterprise. The most successful employers of the jobless are those who have worked,profited and built strong companies in a free market. The very retail distributors who have often been subjected to opportunity killing legislation and regulation have been the first to come forward and offer opportunities to the hard-core unemployed. They know what opportunity means in the life of a man, as well as of a company.

With all those sex education courses, why would a kid prefer to be a dropout?'

TRENDS: There's fashion news in the belts now being shown in stores. Buckles are big and brassy, sometimes antiqued. Most have a handsome look. There's a new trend in wearing these belts, too -- such as at hip-height over a long sweater or sportshirt . . . One custom-tailoring detail that is catching on fast is the deep inverted pleat, in place of an open vent on the new clothes. Men like it . . . Underwear makers are following the lead of shirt manufacturers by introducing undershirts and shorts in deep and bright dress shirt color tones. It may be another step toward coordinations – it certainly brightens up the inner look as well as the outer look!

Price Vs. Free Sample

When conducting business by mail, it would seem obvious that an offer of a free sample will outpull a sample with a price on its head. Not necessarily so. Often a 10 cents offer, a 25 cents offer and even a dollar offer will bring in more response than a free offer.

It is well worth testing because if your offer should bring in more cash replies, you not only reduce your inquiry cost but you get better qualified leads for the follow-up.

Plastics Flourish
In Winter Sports

Plastic skis are making their mark on the nation's slopes this year, according to Chemical and Engineering News, with plastic clothing and plastic boots also enjoying wide popularity. The proportion of plastic skis alone is expected to jump from 16 percent in 1968 to more than 40 percent of the total ski market by 1970, the magazine says. More than $220 million was spent by 2 million skiers on ski clothing and equipment during the last season, the report notes.

About $30 million worth of chemicals and plastics is used to make skiers clothes and boots and another $30 million goes into the skis. The skiers themselves aare increasing in numbers at the rate of 15 to 20 percent each year.

BUSINESS is doing more for real progress than all other human lactivities combined. By business I mean the production and distribution of goods. Unless commerce is efficiently conducted, little else of importance can be accomplished.

Our conservation and our literature are built around the froth of life. We talk about dancers, comedians, actors, painters, sculptors and writers at the dinner table, but if through a miscalculation on the part of some businessman, such a small item as sugar is missing from our table, we talk about little else but sugar. It is because the essentials for comfortable existence are so nicely adjusted that we can indulge ourselves in pleasant discussion of the non-essentials.

It is easy to cheer a great orator, but it requires imagination to cheer the men who devise the system which insures the regular delivery of food. Yet the latter are as deserving of cheers as the former.

Washington - Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

Drew Pearson and Jack Anderson say: Internal Revenue is checking Don Nixon's taxes; Don is looking for clients; he made one mysterious trip to the White House

WASHINGTON--The Internal Revenue service now has the delicate duty of "auditing" the income tax returns of the President's younger brother, Don Nixon.

Actually a tax investigation of Don was initiated by Internal Revenue in the last administration, but Don asked that it be postponed. The Johnson administration agreed, so now Internal Revenue is in the position of scrutinizing the tax returns of the President's brother at a time when the President controls it.

Meanwhile evidence accrues that Don Nixon has been trying to capitalize once again on his brother's fame. This is not exactly new for Don. While Richard was Vice President, Don tried to establish a chain of drive-in restaurants which featured a triple-decker sandwich called the "Nixonburger." To finance the venture and pay bad debts hd borrowed $205,000 from the Hughes Tool Company.

The Nixonburger never became a threat to the hamburger of cheeseburger, however, and the Drive-In idea flopped. The $205,000 loan, secured by a mortgage of lot 10 or Whittier Boulevard in Whittier, Calif. -- a piece of real estate that no bank would have accepted as security for a loan of that size--was never repaid. The Nixon family lot is now registered in the name of the Hughes Tool Company.

Don also incorporated himself and began selling shares to eager Republicans who might want to curry favor with the Vice President. This idea backfired when an embarrassed Richard Nixon found out about it and quietly put the Kibosh on Donald Nixon, Inc.

Unabashed, Don continued to wheel and deal, once had to be bailed out by his famous brother for several thousand dollars. Not long after Richard was elected, Don began boasting to friends that he expected to make a million dollars during the next four years. As the first step, he negotiated a substantial raise in his own salary from Ogden foods, a vending machine company which he represents in California.

--Eye Out For Clients--

He also made contact with John Hill, President of educational play, a Boston company that manufacturers playground equipment. Hill has made a pitch for some of the "New Money" that President Nixon has authorized for cleaning up riot areas.

Hill insisted to this column that Don Nixon didn't offer to help wangle playground grants from the Nixon administration, but that he was interested merely in representing the company on the West Coast. In any case, Don wrote Hill an abrupt letter, withdrawing from the deal, after he learned we were investigating.

Don also showed up at the White House the other morning with Elmer Stone, Assistant General counsel for Ryan Aeronautical company, in tow. Stone has largely taken over the duties of B.K. Goodman, the General counsel, who has been in poor health.

Ryan Aeronautical is reported to be in need of government contracts to improve its financial situation. To get favored treatment from the Nixon administration, Stone apparently sought to take advantage of his friendship with Don Nixon.

A company spokesman, when queried by this column, claimed that Stone has been Don's legal adviser. He alibied that the two traveled all the way to Washington merely to notify the White House that the relationship had been severed.

It is, of course, highly unusual for a corporate counsel, without an independent practice of his own, to serve as an outsider's personal attorney. Nevertheless the company spokesman insisted that Stone wanted to tell the White House in person--because Ryan is a defense contractor--that he is no longer Don Nixon's Attorney.

Whatever the motive, it is a fact that Nixon and Stone together called upon White House aide John Ehrlichman. What they said and did is one of those secrets which do not come under the new Nixon communications complex. Ehrlichman refused to talk about the visit.

It would seem, however, that, in view of Don's past wheeling-dealing, the public should be entitled to know the details of what the President's brother was doing in the White House with a defense contractor.

--Badly Needed Education--

Without any fanfare, President Nixon has been bringing student radicals to the White House for private talks. They've been organized by Bud Wilkinson, the University of Oklahoma Coach, now on the White House staff, but Henry Kissinger and other top advisers have also participated.

These advisers have given Nixon a blunt report on the education gap, namely that big-city schools are getting more children but less money, that the taxpayers are also rebelling against additional property taxes to increase the school budgets, and the only solution is federal assistance to big-city schools. It has been suggested that it may take $8 billion a year to bring our deteriorating schools back up to standard.

Meanwhile, the students for a democratic society and the black panthers have joined forces in some cities. They have also increased in number.

A year ago, there were only 70 black panthers in the United States--all located in the San Francisco area. Now there are over 1,600 black panthers in 45 cities. They are dedicated to guerrilla warfare and have already started assassinating policemen. They also have direct ties to their leader, Eldridge Cleaver, who is hiding out in Cuba.

By joining forces with the SDS, the Black Panthers hope to convert the SDS from mere campus disorder to outright guerrilla warfare in the big cities. They are also attempting to infiltrate the labor unions and stir up trouble there.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

HEARD ON THE LEFT:

The New Revolution And an Old Stop Watch

Washington, D. C.: -- This is a tale of one city and two conventions -- the national gatherings of the New Left and the Democratic Party. The SDS attended both concalves -- one on the outside with staves and one on the inside with muscle and Maoist malice for all. Time: the present. Place: Chicago, of course.

When all the reports of the SDS 9th National "Convention," replete with gory stories of bodyguarded speakers, fistfights, mauling, hauling, howling, pouncing on microphones, cheering for Che Guevara, hysteria for "Ho Ho Ho" were in, I sought out the 42-year-old Congressman John Murphy (N.Y.). He was parliamentarian of the 1968 Democratic National Nominating Convention.

Carefully, from his records and time sheets, we reconstructed the procedure at the convention -- as it was operated inside the control center while the SDS was outside the Hilton, the convention headquarters' hotel.

Here's the record. Here's what was happening behind the Chicago International Amphitheatre podium while the New Left shouted that Democratic Party leaders were not reflecting the will of the delegates, nor the sentiment of the people nor the sheer essence of democratic procedure.

"I was persona non grata with some groups," says Jack Murphy in that crisp, executive fighting-Irish tone of his, "who felt that the convention was too authoritarian and favored one candidate. I'll just recount some instances where the application of the (convention) rules was liberally applied."

Congressman Murphy's record shows that the time consumed in the nomination of candidates for president by the minority more than doubled that spent on Hubert Humphrey.

The nominating speech for Sen. Eugene McCarthy -- 40 minutes; Senator George McGovern -- 41 minutes; Reverend Channing Philips -- 32 minutes; and Vice President Hubert Humphrey -- 32 minutes.

"On the night of nomination for Vice President," adds Jack Murphy, "the name of Julian Bond was placed in nomination by Donald Peterson of Wisconsin.

"Bond's name had not been sent to the Secretary of the Convention, nor had Peterson sent his name to the Secretary as required under the rules of the Convention. These rules were made so that some order could be maintained and a program set forth.

"Members from various state delegations came to the platform protesting that Julian Bond did not meet the Constitutional requirements to be Vice President. However, his name still was permitted to remain in contention until Georgia was recognized. At that time Bond withdrew himself as a candidate and mentioned that his age was a limiting factor."

The third liberal application by Mr. Murphy came during the debate over the anguished issue of the Vietnam war.

Congressman Murphy extended the time from one to two hours. The minority plank was given half the time. The anti-Vietnam block's time was to be controlled by Rep. Philip Burton (Calif.), its official spokesman.

All of the minority's 60 minutes was consumed by delegates pleading passionately for their cause. I heard no howls. No one attempted to seize the microphone. There was no violence. No delegate had to be accompanied to the podium or mike by gun-carrying bodyguards so characteristic of the SDS "convention" 10 months later. The very thought of such melodramatics at a Democratic (or Republican) convention amused Mr. Murphy.

Then came the turn for the next to the last scheduled anti-Vietnam speaker, Ted Sorensen, intimate of the late Jack Kennedy.

"Ted Sorensen took all of the time alloted to Sen. Wayne Morse," asserts Mr. Murphy, "who was to be the concluding speaker. Although the (minority's) full 60 minutes had been used, Morse was not limited in his remarks -- although no compensating time was given to the majority plank. The purpose of the losely time requirements such as these was to obviate any criticism that people were cut off from speaking or denied the right to speak. The Convention rules were in order and naturally favored no particular candidate."

Compare this procedure with the chaotic "delegations" at the SDS sessions in the Coliseum. Compare this with the splits, splinters, expulsions, vituperation, and disregard for democratic procedure or controlled traditional registration of delegates. Compare the authority of delegates at both conventions -- the ballotbox election of delegates to the Democratic convention -- and the flooding of the Colisum by packs of SDS (regulars) and bands of Progressive Labor Party-Worker - Student Alliance orthodox Maoists brought in by bus and special planes.

Now that the SDS have had their crack at democracy within their own ranks brutishly as well as amateurishly, they now claim the intellectual right to be the critics of "the establishment"?

They can't even clean their own hall.

Thirty Years Married, And Still Blissful

Dear Readers: This may be just another day to you, but it is a very special day in my life. Thirty years ago, on a sweltering Sunday afternoon in Sioux City, Iowa, Jules Lederer slipped a plain gold band on my finger and I became his wife.

Honesty forbids me describing myself as a student at Morningside College, so I'll simply say I was enrolled there. Jules had had one year at Northwestern -- High School, that is. He was a product of Detroit, handsome, energetic, imaginative, a born optimist and eager to take on the world. He had a good job and a promising future. He was also broke.

I was an effervescent, fun-loving girl, hopelessly square, driven by a crusading spirit to save the world -- sort of a Jewish Joan of Arc. I was also engaged to marry a law student in California. But Jules, never one to be discouraged by small obstacles, asked me to marry him anyway. I said yes and the wedding took place three months later.

We were blessed the following year with a baby girl, Margo. From then on, I saw more of the moving van than I saw of Jules. When an opportunity for advancement arose, he took it. And it seemed always to be in another city. We moved from Sioux City to St. Louis, from St. Louis to New Orleans, from New Orleans to Milwaukee. Then came World War II and Jules served in the Infantry. In 1945 we moved from Little Rock to Los Angeles, from Los Angeles to Eau Claire, Wisconsin, and from Eau Claire to Chicago.

Time, that subtle thief of youth, is often cursed by those who long to stop the clock, or turn it back, but we want none of that. Each year has been better than the last because we have grown together. A good marriage, it is said, is made in heaven. This might be true, but the maintenance work must be done right down here. A successful marriage is not a gift, it is an achievement. No real marriage can exist without differences in opinion and the ensuing battles. But battles can be healthy. They bring to marriage the vital principle of equal partnership. If there is a secret to making marriage work it is "Never go to bed mad."

Our 30 years together have been blessed with good health, good fortune, good friends, good times and success. Jules says he could not have made it without me. I am not sure he is right. But I could not have made it without him. and of this I am certain. He taught me how to be alone without feeling sorry for myself. He taught me never to back away from a challenge -- that it is better to try and fail and then to try again. He taught me how to use my time productively. His work habits are impeccable. I learned mine from him.

Being Mrs. Jules Lederer has been superb training for Ann Landers. Thirty years with this unselfish, supportive, responsive man has enabled me to live life as few people get the opportunity to live it. Being Ann Landers' husband could pose a terrible problem but Jules has met the challenge with dignity and incredible good humor. My husband is my best friend, and I am his. I consider it a priviege to be the wife of this beautiful guy who took on the world with a ninth grade education and a hole in his sock.

Bodyware To Become Bundlesome, Maybe?

NEW YORK (AP) — Come September, ladies may have to admit that getting dressed for a party is like girding for battle.

And they may toss out their delicate velvet jewelry chests for clunky metal trunks.

The reason is "bodyware"—a curious combination of Arthurian armor and delicate costume jewelry which is meant to be worn over—or under—fashion's nude, transparent, or just plain opaque looks.

Bodyware includes vests of chain or colored stones, belts that dangle at least six inches below the hips, bracelets that cuff the wrists, pearl-studded breastplates and bib-necklaces.

Designer Kenneth Jay Lane admitted that a woman "has to be beautiful" to wear the styles which might pinch a flabby back or midriff.

He made his comments after a minishowing this week of several pounds of his baubles piled upon one beautiful woman and one careful man.

Steven Brody, one of the designers of the Cadoro costume jewelry collection, suggested that the new hardware is "accessories, not jewelry."

He said the real beauty of his firm's body shields and sleeve jewelry—chains and stones to replace, or wear on top of, long sleeves—was to update an old dress.

"You can put one of these on and change the look of yesterday's little black dress," he said.

With ropes of pearls staging their biggest comeback since the '30s many jewelry designers have decorated bodyware with individual pearls as big as marbles.

Stanley Conheim, of Sharon Manufacturing, showed a version of a jewelry skirt at the annual Swarovski Jewelry Awards. It was a belt of rhinestones, with rhinestone tassels that hung like a grass skirt from the waist.

And just in case the new armor does not do the trick, Cadoro has updated the cane into a jeweled walking stick—with good-luck amulets and a sturdy tip for swatting at offenders.

MOBILE PULPIT

SUTTON-IN-ASHFIELD, England (AP) — A local churchman, Arthur Quincey, has built a mobile pulpit and is offering the design to any clergymen who have difficulty in bridging the gap between themselves and small congregations in large churches where pulpits are a long way from the pews. It cost less than 15 dollars and can be made in under 10 hours, Quincey says. The mobile pulpit just hooks on to the pews that are nearest to the congregation.

Bertrand Boy Joins Battle Against Muscular Dystrophy

Kevin Collier, 12, Bertrand, has joined the campaign against muscular distrophy. Kevin hosted a carnival Monday, in his parents' yard, to help raise funds for this campaign.

The Muscular Dystrophy Carnival Kit, ordered from WPSD-TV, Paducah, Ky., has been brought to the public by that station's "Popeye Show." The show is presented each week-day afternoon.

Kevin's carnival opened for business at 1 p.m. Monday, with 11 children waiting for the festivities to begin. The games, refreshments, decorations and music were all from suggestions in the kit.

The refreshment stand offered choices of drink, banked goods, and bubble gum. Punch, five cents a glass, two cents for a cookie, five cents for a brownie, and bubble gum sold for two cents a piece.

In the game department, Kevin offered bowling green, milk bottle drop, sponge toss, marble shoot and pie toss. Each game cost two cents to play, and the winner was allowed a second turn free.

Kevin is one of 672 children who ordered the "carnival kit," and all these children are competing to see who can earn the most money for the campaign. The winner will receive a prize Saturday from WPST-TV studios, when a party will be held in honor of the contestants.

When the festivities are over, and everyone has forgotten about the carnival campaign, the charitable work of the funds raised will go on.

And Kevin Collier will remember when he sees a poster for the fight against muscular dystrophy, that he helped to fight a disease which can cripple people his own age.

EVEN KEVIN Collier's sister, Jennifer, 3, had to pay for a glass of punch at the carnival held to raise money to fight muscular dystrophy.

It Is Unusual

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) - Most brides walk down the aisle. Mrs. Robert Rockey rolled down it.

"We met on roller skates," said the new bride. "Skating is our favorite sport, so we decided to be married on skates."

That's how the former Edith Frable explained her wedding Monday evening in the middle of the Hecla Park Skating Rink.

The bride-wearing a pink lace wedding gown, white veil and shoe skates trimmed in pink - skated to the middle of the rink on her brother's arm.

Awaiting her was her husband - to - be, the best man and maid of honor, all balanced nervously.

When their vows had been said and rings exchanged, the couple skated to the rear of the rink where they headed a receiving line.

The words chicory, hyssop, myrrh and saffron all were borrowed from Sumerian, an ancient language.

About 88 per cent of the population of Pakistan are Moslems, with about 7 per cent Hindu.

The Erigbaagtsa Indians of the Amazon spend nearly all the daylight hours cooped up in dark palm huts to protect themselves from clouds of tiny bloodsucking flies called piums.

Women Golf Notes

This is the midway point of Sikeston women's golf season. Players are braving the heat to have enough scores to be eligible for the Buckner Ragsdale trophy. Each player must have fifteen scores of eighteen holes each before July 1, and a like number before October 1.

Many of the golfers are slowly cutting down their handicaps, and as a result some fine scores have been recorded. Mary Bain has scored a 36 for nine holes and a 78 for eighteen. Alberta Cox scored a 39 and a 78 for eighteen. Betty Dawson also has a 39 - 78 to her credit.

Phyllis Joyner has scored one 39 and June Watson a 38.

Tuesday's prizes were awarded to the players who came closest to the flagstick on hole number 6. Winnings were Phyllis Joyner, Doris Stepp, Evelyn Campbell and Jeanette Latham.

Betty Dawson was this week's hostess.

Little Leaguers

No less than 11 runs separated teams in Little League games last night with Rotary posting the biggest margin as it downed the Bank of Sikeston 37-5.

Collins started the Musial action off on the right foot as it defeated the Daily Standard 23-1. Twenty players combined to post the win as Launius led the way as he pitched a no-hitter.

Rotary took its win in three innings of play as it accumulated 12 runs in the first, 10 in the second, and 15 in the third. Vaught took the win for Rotary as he hurled a one-hitter against the Bank of Sikeston.

Caproco opened the American division play with a 14-3 win over Fabick. Taylor received the win for Caproco as Gater was endowed with the loss.

Police also won by a 14-3 margin as it got back into the winner's circle by downing First National. Thompson led the way for the squad as he pitched a no-hitter, scored three runs, and collected three hits for three trips to the plate.

Five Area Golfers Win At Jackson

Five area golfers placed in the Kimberland Invitational Golf tournament at Jackson Sunday afternoon as C. W. Knauts successfully defended his title with a seven - under - par 137 in the 36-hole competition.

Area golfers coming out well in the play were Dr. Milton Kobler, Charleston, Jim Bush, Sikeston, David Agey, Dexter, King Sidwell, Sikeston, and Jim Godsey of Sikeston.

Knauts, Piggott, Ark., was four strokes under his nearest opponents, Robert McBride, Cape Girardeau and Buddy Godwin, Poplar Bluff, who tied for the runner-up position with 141's.

Mike David, Bonne Terre, was fourth in the final standings with 142.

Connie Connell, Mounds, Ill. who usually follows the southeast Missouri golf circuit had to pass up the weekend activity to play at Fulton, Ky., where he was defending champion.

More than 170 entries were in the field for the Saturday-Sunday action at Jackson, competing for prizes in five classes.

Herman Stiles, Poplar Bluff, won the "A" class with a 145, with Jack Litz of Jackson second at 149. Ray Miller of Mounds was the "B" winner with 150, with Sikeston's Jim Busch in the runner-up spot at 156.

Berb Holshouser, Cape Girardeau, fired 159 to claim Class "C" honors and Bill Busby, St. Louis, was the Class "D" a titalist with 165.

Victory For Cards

ST. LOUIS (AP) - The St. Louis Cardinals won their customary payday victory plus one Tuesday night, sweeping a doubleheader with the New York Mets, 4-1 and 8-5.

It was the 22nd consecutive payday victory for the Redbirds, but it was the first time they had to win two games to keep the checkday record clear. The Redbirds are paid on the 1st and 15th.

Steve Carlton upped his record to 9-5 with a three-hitter in the first half of the twi-night doubleheader. He lowered his earned run average to 1.78 by holding the Mets hitless in all but the third inning and fanning nine batters.

Joe Torrez, now 2-4, picked up his first victory as a starter. He gave up a walk, three singles and three runs in the first inning of the nightcap, but settled down and pitched well until the eighth, when threy straight singles knocked him out. The Mets scored one run off Torrez and one off reliever Joe Hoerner.

Cardinal shortstop Steve Huntz, who also took a turn at second base Tuesday night, had one RBI in 50 times at bat before game time.

He hit a double in the opener and drove in a run and his bases - loaded double in the second contest scored three more. He was one for three in the first game and one for two in the nightcap.

The 23-year-old Cleveland, Ohio, product, who played with Tulsa last year, wasn't overly impressed with his own performance.

"It's only one night, I might have more to say about my hitting if I put a few nights like this together," Huntz remarked.

He did allow it felt good to be cheered when he came to bat again after his bases - loaded double.

"Generally all I've heard was boos, if I've heard anything up till now," he said.

Nolan Ryan 3-1 was charged with the opening loss and Joe Dilauro 0-3 was the nightcap loser.

The teams meet again tonight.

Babe Ruth Change

Inadequate facilities have forced the Senior Babe Ruth League play to move its games from Dancer Field to the VFW stadium.

In order to do this, the games have had to be rescheduled so they do not overlap with other games being played at the stadium.

Danforth Gives Three C's for Fighting Crime

WEST PLAINS, Mo. (AP)—Proposals for the anti - crime effort in Missouri were embodied in "three C's"—coordination, clarification and cash—outlined Tuesday night by John Danforth, state attorney general.

Danforth, indicating his dissatisfaction with the accomplishments of the 1969 Missouri Legislature, said it would be possible to call a special session of the lawmakers on the subject of law enforcement alone.

The Republican attorney general spoke to the Greater West Plains Chamber of Commerce. He said, "There is a wave of fear that towers over a wave of crime. This fear creates hostility—old against young, black against white and rural areas against big cities."

He outlined his "three C's" in this fashion:

—Coordination—Proposal for a Missouri Bureau of Investigation "to provide a central group of well-trained agents, and to provide a real strike force." He would also like to see "regional" jails with regular jail inspections.

—Clarification—To assure that the citizen and the peace officers understand law. Danforth called for clear guidelines for peace officers, and expanded mandatory training.

—Cash—To provide adequate salaries for qualified peace officers. "If we're not willing to pay for crime control," he said, "let's not complain."

Vanlandingham Says Legislature Exhibited More Responsibility

JEFFERSON CITY (AP)—The 1969 Missouri Legislature exhibited more responsibility toward its constituents than any he has been associated with for some time, the leader of the Democratic majority says.

Sen. A. Basey Vanlandingham, D-Columbia, told a radio interviewer after the legislative session adjourned early Tuesday he mail indicated Missourians did not want their state income taxes increased.

That issue, one of a package of revenue bills recommended by Gov. Warren E. Hearnes, failed. Vanlandingham said there will be enough money on hand to get the state through the next fiscal year.

He expressed doubt that Hearnes would call a special session this summer. Vanlandingham said there is the possibility of an emergency session in the fall or next spring

States Run Into Budget Problems

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

California prisons and mental hospitals were buying perishable food on credit today as the legislative logjam over the state budget showed no signs of breaking.

The Ohio Legislature approved an appropriations bill Tuesday night after a 36-hour quarrel that left the state temporarily without spending money. In Pennsylvania, appropriations for July were approved in place of an annual budget.

California's 23 penal institutions and 14 mental hospitals, which buy perishable foods such as eggs, milk and meat every day or two, will have to rely on local merchants' trust, according to Caspar Weinberger, state director of finance.

"They will not be able to get food unless they can persuade some supplier to give it in good faith," he said.

Other state officials said they had no funds to buy postage stamps or office supplies.

Gov. Ronald Reagan's $6.37 billion budget was stalled when Democrats refused to vote for the bill unless Reagan increased school aid. The Republican governor offered a $16 million increase in the $1.3 billion school budget, but Democrats weren't satisfied.

A two-thirds majority of 54 is needed in the 80-seat Assembly, where the GOP holds a 41-38 edge.

"I haven't seen any indication that the Democrats intend to move from their position," Republican Assembly Speaker Robert T. Monagan said.

Ohio Gov. James A. Rhodes is expected to sign a $4.17 billion appropriations bill today after losing his fight to retain control of the State Controlling Board, which spends the money.

Both legislative houses approved the bill Tuesday night. John McBroy, the governor's top aide, said, "We have no objections to it."

The bill changed the makeup of the Controlling Board to the state finance director and six legislators, at least two from the minority party. It originally contained the finance director, attorney general, state auditor and two legislators from the majority party.

Rhodes and the leadership of both houses are Republicans.

"We take a lot of guff for raising money," said Sen. William W. Taft of Cleveland. "So we ought to have the power over how it is spent."

The Pennsylvania Legislature approved stopgap funds for government operations and welfare during July after failing to pass Gov. Raymond Shafer's $2.25 billion budget. Shafer had called for a state income tax to finance the budget and legislators balked.

St. Louis Gets Order to Remap Alderman Wards

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A federal judge declared aldermanic apportionment based on voter registration statistics unconstitutional Monday and ordered St. Louis to remap itself along one man, one vote lines.

"It cannot be seriously contended that elected officials represent only registered voters," U. S. Dist. Judge James H. Meredith said. "The right to equal representation does not depend upon the extent of a person's political activity or his exercise of political rights."

Meredith ordered the city to present a plan for reapportionment based on population within 30 days. He also barred the city from holding aldermanic elections until such a plan is approved and instituted. The city's next scheduled aldermanic elections are in 1971, when voters in 14 of St. Louis' 28 wards select representatives.

The judge said 1968 registration statistics indicated the number of voters in wards varied from 7,302 to 11,028. Population differences were more pronounced, with ward population varying from 15,947 to 47,021 based on 1960 census figures.

"These statistics for the City of St. Louis show very clearly that the wards do not comply with the minimal constitutional requirements of equal representation," Meredith said. "No justification is possible for variances of such magnitude."

Mayor A. J. Cervantes termed the decision "a complicated subject." He said the city would issue a statement after officials conferred on the matter.

Meredith ruled on a suit filed by attorney Paul Preisler and five other St. Louis residents. Preisler recently won a court battle to force reapportionment of Congressional districts in Missouri.

Split Over Tactics Teachers In DEA Quit National Unit

By WILLIAM GRANT
Free Press Education Writer

The 1,400-member Detroit Education Association (DEA) has voted to disaffiliate from the million-member National Education Association (NEA).

DEA President Robert Johnson said the vote came because DEA members disapproved of the stand by the Michigan Education Association (MEA) in favor of agency-shop clauses in teacher contracts. The MEA is the state branch of the NEA.

The clause requires teachers either to join the collective-bargaining unit or pay a service fee equal to the dues. The MEA has more than 50 local associations which have agency-shop clauses in their contracts.

"We don't feel professional educators should be forced to join such an organization," Johnson said. "They should have freedom of choice."

The split between the Detroit association and the MEA has been brewing since 1966, when the two groups became embroiled in a controversy over dues collection.

Under the old policy, the DEA collected membership dues and paid the state and national organizations a share. But the MEA insisted it was not inreceiving its share of the dues and forced the DEA to agree to an arrangement whereby the state group would collect the dues and make payments to the local organization.

LAST FALL, the DEA tried to back out of that arrangement and was sued by the MEA.

At the same time, Johnson had launched a DEA drive to force an election among Detroit teachers in hopes of unseating the powerful Detroit Federation of Teachers (DFT) as bargaining agent for the city's 12,000 teachers.

MEA officials called the effort to unseat the DFT "futile" and refused to support it. The DEA fell well short of getting the needed 30 per cent of Detroit's teachers to force an election.

MEA officials Wednesday said a meeting between the MEA executive board and Johnson had been set for Saturday, but that now it probably never would be held.

NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE
Whereas, C. E. Brashear and Sherma Brashear, his wife, by their Deed of Trust, dated the 17th day of July, 1964, and recorded in the Recorder's Office for Scott County, Missouri, in Deed of Trust Book 142 at page 351, conveyed to Douglas W. Dodds, Trustee, the following described property, situated in the County of Scott, State of Missouri, to-wit:
All of Lots Numbered Five (5) and Six (6) in Block "B" of Smiths Addition to the City of Oran, Scott County, Missouri, which conveyance was made to said Douglas W. Dodds, Trustee, in Trust, to secure the payment of a certain note in said Deed of Trust described; and
Whereas, it is provided in and by the terms of said Deed of Trust, that if the holder of said Note shall desire a sale, and in case of the absence, death, refusal to act, or disability in any wise of the above- named Trustee, the then Sheriff of Scott County, State of Missouri, shall act in lieu of and perform the duties and powers delegated to the above - named Trustee in and by the terms of said Deed of Trust; and
Whereas, Douglas W. Dodds, the above- named Trustee, has refused to act; and
Whereas, default was made and still continues in the payment of said note.
Now Therefore, at the request of the legal holder of said note, I, John Dennis, Sheriff of Scott County, State of Missouri, acting as successor Trustee in accordance with the terms of said Deed of Trust, and in the place and stead of the above-named Trustee appointed in and by said Deed of Trust, will sell the property above described at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, at the East front door of the Scott County Court House in the City of Benton, Scott County, Missouri, on Thursday, July 24, 1969, between the hours of nine o'clock a.m. and five o'clock p.m., for the purpose of satisfying said indebtedness and the cost of executing this trust.

If You Were the Judge

Property Has to be Physically Damaged To Collect Damages

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Placid Peter was so sensitive to noise that an ant walking around in his cookie jar could keep him awake all night. Consequently, picture his consternation when he woke up one morning and found a new highway, with noisy cars speeding to and fro, right under his nose. Actually, the state had condemned a large portion of his land for highway purposes and had paid him for doing so. But when the highway was completed, he never figured it would be only 50 feet from his front door. But there it was.

Being a practical fellow and realizing he couldn't remove the highway, he hurried off to court and did the next best thing. He demanded additional payment for the damage to his property due to the increased noise.

"While I got paid for the land that was taken," he conceded, "I didn't get paid for the damage to the land I kept. And certainly all that noise at my front door reduces the value of my property. The noise is enough to make a clam clamor."

"A person can only get paid for damage to property," was the answer, "when the property is some way damaged. Obviously, sound waves cannot damage property."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you require the state to pay Peter for the increased noise?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that generally, a person cannot collect for damages to his property in the absence of some definite physical injury; that payment is not required because something affects his senses.

Former Essex Man Named Refuge Manager

ESSEX — Thomas W. Martin has been named Refuge Manager of the Piedmont National Wildlife Refuge at Round Oak, Georgia, according to recent announcement by C. Edward Carlson, Regional Director of the Southeastern Region for the Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife.

Martin succeeds William H. Julian, Jr., who recently transferred to Blackwater National Wildlife Refuge, Cambridge, Maryland as Refuge Manager.

A veteran of 14 years service with the Bureau, Martin started his Federal career as a Fishery Research Biologist at Woods Hole, Massachusetts. Later he transferred to Wichita Mountains National Wildlife Refuge, Cache, Oklahoma as Assistant Refuge Manager. In 1958 he came to the Southeast as Assistant Refuge Manager of Sabine National Wildlife Refuge, Sulphur, Louisiana, and a short while was promoted to Refuge Managerof Chincoteague National Wildlife Refuge, Chincoteague, Virginia, where he remained for four years. The past seven years he has been Refuge Manager of Santee National Wildlife Refuge, Summerton, South Carolina.

In 1964, Martin was given a Special Art or Service Award for his efforts and participation in carrying out the accelerated Public Works Program.

A native of Essex, Missouri, Martin has a B.S. degree in agriculture from the University of Missouri. He served three years in the Air Force.

As administrator of the Piedmont Refuge, Martin will develop the Refuge for migratory waterfowl and resident birds and mammals. He will be responsible for forest management and improved wildlife habitat, recreation, and economis uses of the area including surplus refuge products. This 33,248- acre area is predominatly pine- hardwood forest.

Martin, with his wife and two children, will live at the refuge.

The University of Washington football team will play Michigan State at East Lansing, Mich., on Sept. 20 and then face Michigan in Ann Arbor, Mich., on Sept. 27. The team will stay in the state until heading home.

Today In U.S. History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Wednesday, July 2, the 183rd day of 1969. There are 182 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1881, President James Garfield was shot by a disappointed office seeker as he walked through the Washington railroad station. Garfield died Sept. 19.

On this date:

In 1776, the Continental Congress in Philadelphia passed a resolution declaring that the American Colonies were free and independent states.

In 1862, President Abraham Lincoln signed the Morrill Act establishing land-grant colleges.

In 1890, the Sherman Anti-Trust Act was passed.

In 1912, a Democratic National Convention in Baltimore nominated Woodrow Wilson for president.

In 1937, the American woman flier, Amelia Earhart, and her co-pilot, Frederick J. Noonan, vanished while on a flight over the Pacific.

In 1940, during World War II, the French government moved to Vichy.

Ten years ago: Pope John XXIII issued his first encyclical, urging world unity and peace.

Five years ago: President Lyndon B. Johnson signed a broad civil rights act.

One year ago: A judge in Britain approved a U.S. request for extradition of James Earl Ray to stand trial for the killing of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

New York City was called "Gotham" by Washington Irving and "Bagdad-on-the-Subway" by O. Henry.

New Contract May Make Johnny Carson TV's Highest Paid

NEW YORK (AP) -- Johnny Carson has signed a multiple-year contract with the National Broadcasting Co. that reportedly makes him the highest paid entertainer in television history.

Industry sources guessed that Carson, host of the "Tonight" show, might be earning up to $85,000 a week over a two- or three-year period. He reportedly receives $1 millions a year under his old contract.

Don Durgin, president of NBC-TV, said Tuesday that Carson got "a good increase and one that I think he richly deserved." He declined to disclose terms of the contract.

Despite Laws, Fireworks Still July 4 Injury Threat

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The automobile has made the Fourth of July holiday an occasion for going places rather then staying home and shooting fireworks.

This factor and the enactment of a variety of laws have come close to eliminating fireworks deaths during Independence Day celebrations. But the crack of fireworks explosions is still heard throughout the land and Americans continue to be injured, sometimes severely.

In 1903, the American Medical Association listed 466 fireworks fatalities.

In recent years, Associated Press compilations have noted one or two or even no deaths.

But bootleggers of pyrotechnics continue to peddle their wares.

A spokesman for the National Fire Protection Association said: "We believe injuries run about 5,000 in the July 4 period."

The association has written a model statute, which permits the use of cap pistols and canes with caps on the end and allows authorized public displays of fireworks.

Eighteen states, with 46 per cent of the nation's population have adopted this model law or similar legislation. They are Arizona, Connecticut, Delaware, Georgia, Illinois, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Minnesota, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Vermont and West Virginia.

Eight states—Alabama, Florida, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan, Oregon, Utah, and Wisconsin— have modified versions of the model law, but they also allow sparklers. They contain 17 per cent of the population.

Nine states and the District of Columbia allow what are known as Class C fireworks. These are less powerful than some of the heavy noise- and fire-makers and include sparklers, small firecrackers and Roman candles. These states — Colorado, Idaho, Kentucky, Montana, North Dakota, South Carolina, Texas, Virginia and Wyoming—contain 13 per cent of the population.

Five states—California, Kansas, Nebraska, New Mexico and Washington, holding 13 per cent of the population—allow local enforcing authorities to decide which of the Class C fireworks can be sold.

Eight states, with 10 per cent of the nation's population, permit all Class C fireworks. They are Louisiana, Mississippi, Missouri, Oklahoma, South Dakota, Tennessee, Alaska and Arkansas.

Two states, Nevada and Hawaii, have virtually no state regulation.

"The law, and enforcement of the law, while usually at the local level, is quite spotty," said the NFPA spokesman.

"Bootlegging seems to be on the increase. The problem is commercial bootlegging and bootlegging by persons for their own use."

The bootleggers bring the fireworks from a state with liberal controls to a state with strict laws.

Michigan permits only the least dangerous fireworks. But there is heavy traffic in illegal fireworks from Canada, especially through Detroit.

Mexico also is a source of supply.

Every year around July 4 state or local police in Massachusetts arrest a storekeeper or two for selling imported fireworks from under the counter.

Tennessee law leaves the choice to municipalities and counties, which generally bar all but sparklers. Fireworks are available, however, at roadside stands.

Maryland permits the manufacture of fireworks, but bans possession or sale except for public displays. There has been much feeling that such manufacture should be outlawed because of recent explosions at plants which produce fireworks.

Georgia's law was changed this year to permit manufacturing in the state—but the fireworks must be sold outside the state.

The law in Arizona, one of the strict control states, permits the sale of fireworks to persons outside the state.

Across the country, statutes and punishment show a wide variation. Fines for violators range from $25 to $1,000, and jail terms from 20 days to a year.

Nevada gives the state fire marshal power to make regulations for the control of fireworks, but holders of that office haven't done so. Washoe County (Reno) has barred rockets, Roman candles and other fireworks. Clark County (Las Vegas) allows only small fountains and pinwheels which do not explode. Most of the other 15 counties have no regulations.

Hawaii's ground rules: no aerial fireworks and homemade crackers. No fireworks can be set off on streets, sidewalks or beaches.

There can be variety within states. Kansas limits sales to crackers no more than 1.5 inches long, Roman candles, railroad fuses and truck flares and sparklers. But most of the larger cities in Kansas have ordinances against the sale of anything except caps. South Dakota has restrictions on size but many communities don't allow fireworks to be shot off within the city limits.

Congress adopted the Child Protection Act in 1966. Under its provisions, the Food and Drug Administration has banned such powerful firewoks—cherry bombs and giant salutes—except for agricultural uses, such as scaring off crows, and military purposes.

Hearnes Rates Legislative Session Not a Total Loss

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Almost everyone agreed it was a lousy, negative session but there the unanimity ended.

Gov. Warren E. Hearnes, in a post-midnight news conference, said his greatest disappointment was that the personality clashes reduced the legislature's production record.

But he found some solace in the enactment of a Congressional Redistricting bill—to answer the third Federal Court rejection of Missouri laws in this regard—and a proposed constitutional change to permit use of highway funds for toll roads.

The last was his pet. It was the first thing he asked for last January in his message to the legislature.

As it goes on the ballot, either at the general election in November 1970 or at a special election sooner, it would permit use of highway user tax money for toll roads. Hearnes asked for it after the State Supreme Court said a year ago his old toll road law was unconstitutional.

Not to be outdone, Sen. Earl R. Blackwell, D-Hillsboro, Senate president pro tem, had his own news conference only minutes after the governor had finished.

Blackwell said "the governor has got to be completely out of his head" to say the state was $19 million short of meeting its obligations in the coming year.

Hearnes was restrained during his news conference, Blackwell angry. His voice rose at times and he challenged Hearnes to try to get him defeated in his district.

The Late, Late Show—a news conference for House minority leader R. J. (Bus) King, found the Clayton Republican saying that on the final night the House leadership acted with "complete stupidity."

King said there "must be a special session if the governor has the guts to call it. Or next year he's going to have to say what he wants."

King referred to the Hearnes message last January when he said if he were a legislator he would favor an income tax increase. It was only after legislative criticism that the governor said flatly he wanted an increase in corporate and individual income taxes—a desire that was lost in the final windup confusion.

So, 90 minutes after the session fell apart, it looked like this:

The governor blamed the personality clash with Blackwell— a clash he said he had not sought.

Blackwell blamed the governor for controlling the House and attempting to wield the same control over the Senate.

King blamed the Democrats. He said "while this political struggle went raging for endless weeks and months the people's business was summarily ignored."

Hearnes said he would consider the problem before deciding whether to call a special session.

Blackwell said "to call a special session now would be stupid."

King said he thought the governor would have to call a special session to meet the needs of such services as welfare.

Rep. Thomas A. Walsh, D-St. Louis, called it the worst session he's attended. He has been a member of the house since 1945 and generally supports Hearnes.

The governor said this kind of session could hurt the Democratic party and no one argued.

California Without Budget

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — California began a new fiscal year without a budget today and Gov. Ronald Reagan flatly refused to accept an emergency bill to keep the state running for 30 days.

As a result, the nation's most populous state was plunged into unprecedented fiscal chaos. Salaries for state employes were cut off and Reagan asked them to work for free. State off cials no longer had authority to pay wages or bills.

The Republican governor, at a 2 a.m. news conference, blamed Assembly Democrats led by Assemblyman Jesse M. Unruh, a Reagan political rival.

"Blocking the budget for the state is the most irresponsible single act in the history of California state government," said Reagan.

Development Council Has Regular Monthly Meeting

MALDEN--The Bootheel Economic Development Council and Bootheel Regional Planning Commission held a joint meeting with Pat Lee, chairman, presiding.

A full reports on various projects were made after the minutes of the previous meeting had been read and seconded.

Ted Hull reported on the progress of the vegetables on which he was doing research. He said that a Field Day was being planned for July 9 so that area farmers and food processors could see the results of the different kinds of vegetables being grown.

L.R. Bain gave the treasurer's report for the Bootheel Regional Planning Commission. He reported a balance of $19,621.12. Mr. Bain said that Blodgett, Advance, and Dudley were the only towns that have not paid their 1968 assessments.

Motion was made by L.F. Wheeler and seconded by L.R. Bain to transfer $4,000,00 from the Planning Commission to the Council in order to comply with the Federal matching funds. Motion carried.

R.J. Dirks gave no treasurer's report this month for the Counil due to an attempt to get the treasurer's report to coincide with the Council's month ending on the 15th. There was a list of all expenditures from May 16 to June 15 passed out for the boards approval. Motion was made by Randall Ramsey and seconded by L.F. Wheeler to approve expenditures for May 16 to June 15. Motion carried.

Sewer Plan Readied

Bud Waters, consulting engineer for the Four-County Sewer and Water Plan, reported that he had contacted approximately 80% of the towns, discussing with mayors and city leaders the town's plans. Mr. Waters stated he probably would have Part I completed shortly. After July 15, he would be ready to meet with the water and sewer steering committee.

Philip Shelton and Bob Puiliam then reported on the present status of the Law Council, Health Care Program, various city's projects, the higher education needs program, and all E.D.A. projects are pending in the Duluth office and Washington, D.C.

J.B. Martin reported that E.D.A. set up the Budget Categories for the quarterly financial report. Janitorial Services included in Utilities and no budget item for C.P.A. fees. He recommended that $500.00 be transferred from Per Diem and $500.00 from Personnel Burden. The Miscellaneous item to be increased from $1,500.00 to $2,100.00 - the additional $600.00 for C.P.A. cost. The Utilities and Janitor item to be increased $400.00 - $1,000.00 for Utilities and $400.00 for Janitorial Services. The total budget of $78,800.00 would remain the same. Motion was made by L.F. Wheeler and seconded by J.T. Holder to approve the transfer of these funds and the operating budget as presented. Motion carried.

J. B. Martin stated that the $25,000 surety bond would cover both signatures of the Commission and the Council without additional cost. He also stated that resolutions have been sent to the Bank of Hayti and First National Bank of Malden.

Lea reported on his trip to Kansas City to a multi-agency meeting involving O.E.O., S.B.A., and two other agencies. He said it involved the new thrust toward "Black Capitalism". He stated the meeting was disappointing. Mr. Lea then read the list of the new members who will be approved and notified by the Department of Community Affairs. He told the board that original plans called for the election of Bootheel Economic Development Council officers at tonight's meeting, but due to failure of notification of board members, the election will be held at next month's meeting.

Lea said that two television stations have contacted him regarding a program for them. He thanked Mr. Stapleton for the excellent promotional coverage that he had extended to the Bootheel Council.

Hurshel Crass reported that H.U.D. (Housing and Urban Development) has awarded the Department of Community Affairs $425,000 to do state planning. Mr. Godsey, State Planner, stated that due to the small amount of funds available, a priority rating system was developed and the Bootheel was in the first ten regions to be considered for funding. Mr. Godsey said there are three methods which may be used.

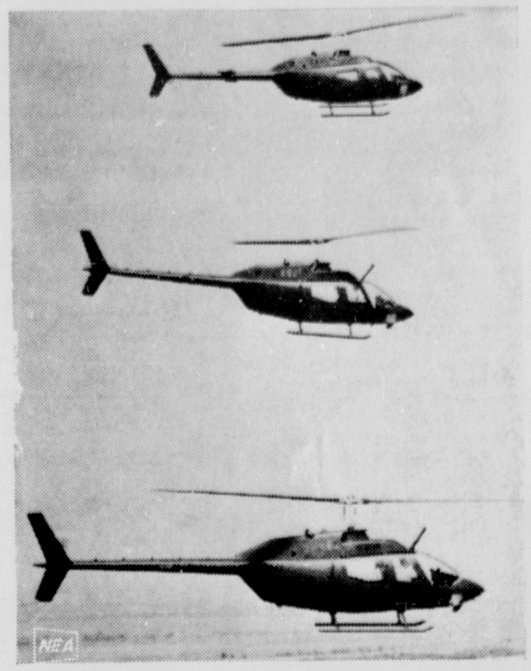
1. Department of Community Affairs can hire planner for the region.

2. The Region can do own employing of planner.

3. Planning may be done by a private consultant.

Godsey stated that most regions had preferred to employ their own planner. J.B. Martin stated that some members from the Council may want to attend a meeting with some HUD officials on June 25 and 26 before they commit themselves about which route they may choose. Pat Lea requested some of the Council members go to the meeting in Jefferson City June 25 and 26 to gather more information in regard to regional planning. Mr. Lea told Mr. Crass and Mr. Godsey that a decision would be reached at the next board meeting of the Regional Planning Commission.

Crass read a resolution requesting state financial aid to the Regional Planning Commissions which has been adopted by eleven other regional commissions. Motion was made by L.F. Wheeler and seconded by John Brannock that Pat Lea sign the resolution. Motion was carried.



TRIPLE-DECKER formation is maintained by three Kiowa light observation helicopters, the newest addition to the Army's chopper fleet. The Army has ordered 2,200 Kiowas, produced by Bell at Fort Worth, Tex.

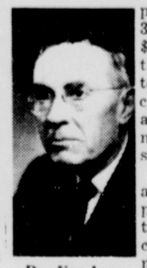
Handouts Destroy Character

THE City Planning Commission of New York has approved a 300,000 - word, $19-billion plan that is expected to change the city's skyline and alter its economic and social structure.



Dr. Kershner

The $5 billion a year that this plan is expected to cost must come, so the planners say, from the Federal government.

The main purpose of the plan is to create a new middle class by giving three million poor people "direct payments, new public service jobs, subsidy of expanded jobs in the private sector and stipends during advanced training."

Giving money to poor people has never yet produced middle class people. It is more likely to reduce the present middle class to the poor class.

People achieve middle class standing by character, integrity, initiative and hard work. To greatly increase the burden on them in this attempt to buy a new middle class will reduce them to the poverty level.

What we need is more earned money and less free welfare. If able-bodied citizens were required to do useful work in return for relief payments, we would be on the road to a solution of the problem. Giving people more money without obligating them to do useful work for it, is destructive of character and will cause a rapid increase in the number of people needing and demanding relief. It is the road to bankruptcy and loss of freedom.

Many of our poor people are not able to earn standard wages, but they could earn something. If employers were not required to pay minimum wages to people incapable of earning them, many unemployed people would find jobs. There ought also to be an apprentice wage for younger persons until they acquire the skill and experience that would enable them to earn standard wages.

The destruction of freedom in the marketplace is responsible for the insoluble problem of welfare and the demand for more and more relief.

When government takes money from some and gives it to others, it is violating the Commandments against coveting and stealing. No nation will long retain its freedom if it continually expands that process.

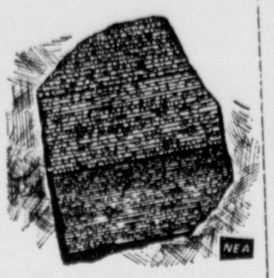
The world's largest telescope is located on Mt. Palomar, Calif. It has a 200-inch reflector. A telescope reflector is a concave mirror, usually made of Pyrex and coated with either silver or aluminum. According to The World Almanac, light rays hit the reflector and are then directed to the upper end of the telescope where they are magnified and observed through an eye-piece.



The Rosetta Stone, found in 1799 by one of Napoleon's soldiers during the ill-fated French invasion of Egypt, was used as the key to understanding hieroglyphics—ancient Egyptian picture writing. The World Almanac notes that the black basalt tablet was inscribed with the same text in three languages—hieroglyphic, demotic and Greek.

Automatic parking meters began sprouting on the sidewalks of America on July 16, 1935, when Oklahoma City recognized the genius of inventor Carlton Magee and purchased a number of his Park-O-Meters, The World Almanac says. Today, untold millions of coins later, the ubiquitous parking meter rations time and curb space from coast to coast, with 60,000 in New York City alone.

Famous Kansas City Landmark 100 Years Old

KANSAS CITY — A famous landmark which assured that Kansas City would flourish as a metropolis will soon be 100 years old.

On Wednesday, a ceremony will mark the centennial of the Hannibal Bridge, the first major structure to span the Missouri, and the river's first permanent rail crossing.

Back in the 1850's Kansas Citians put up uite a struggle to get their bridge. The city was competing with Leavenworth, Kansas, then five times the size of Kansas City, and each was trying to persuade the Hannibal and St. Joe Railroad to run a line through its community.

It was the Kansas Citians who staged the better fight. From a population of 3,000, they managed to raise some $60,000 to build the coveted branch line from Cameron, Missouri to Kansas City. Men of prominence -- Kersey Coates, Milton McGee, John W. Reed — raised the money by personal subscription and won the attention of the Boston railroad owners.

But once Kansas City defeated Leavenworth in he rivalry for the bridge, there were other problems. No one knew how long the bridge should be, and it took time and painstaking effort to angleize the distance from drawings. Missouri waters were rough and changeable, and Octave Chanute (the son of a French professor and the man chosen to design the bridge) struggled with several plans before he came up with a successful design — an idea adapted from a German bridge over the Rhine.

After several years of construction — when the Hannibal Bridge was at last completed — a dedication was held which was one of the great events in Kansas City history. The unforgettable celebration attracted nearly every able soul in the city. Early on the morning of July 3, 1869, the crowd gathered at the celebration site, along with notables from all over the United States . . . twenty-one mayors from other cities, five governors from out of state, aristocratic out-of-towners with carriages and footmen. On horseback, in buggies, wagons and omnibuses came throngs of eager people to witness the test of this massive Colossus of iron and wood.

Then, with everyone viewing, locomotives and trains of cars passed forward and backward over the bridge, with no vibration detectable. The Kansas City news media described the test this way:

A train of ten cars, drawn by a magnificent engine, Hannibal, from the Hannibal and St. Joe Road, entered upon the bridge from the northern shore. Hidden in flags, festooned and illuminated with flowers, the gala train moved majestically across. The train halted on this side of the bridge and gave time for the examination of cars. They were of the very finest quality, two of them being A.B. Pullman's celebrated palace sleeping cars . . .

Then as the crowd watched with tense interest the bridge was swung around to let a gayly decked steamboat pass, and a great shout of triumph arose as the bridge swung easily back into position. The whole span had been swung with only four men at the levers.

After the successful demonstration of the bridge's strength and utility, a costly celebration thrilled the crowd. No one ever forgot the balloon ascension, in which a town jeweler sailed in the sky toward Independence . . . or the parade, military bands, speeches, or the giant barbecue held afterward in Evan's Woods, where two four-year-old steers were roasted whole, standing on their feet.

At the end of the day all the local powers-that-be assembled at the Coates House, then the Broadway Hotel, for a sumptuous feast.

Nothing was spared in making it the fanciest evening in many a decade — they brought in champagne, crates of free cigars, a mammoth cake ten feet long in the shape of the Hannibal Bridge, and there were fireworks visible through the banquet hall windows.

It was a proud moment for every Kansas Citian. Townspeople still talk about the coming of the Bridge, from stories passed down by their grandfathers. (And so, in fact, do Leavenworth residents who, to this day, contend that were it not for the bridge, Leavenworth would have been the metropolis Kansas City is today.)

The famous bridge survived well until 1886, when a span was blown down, and even through the flood of 1903, when it was again damaged. In 1917 a new bridge was opened just west of the old one. But the old Hannibal Bridge is still visible today just east of the Broadway Bridge. It is in use by railroads and serves barge traffic.

The Centennial Celebration next month will commemorate the Hannibal Bridge as the first north-south rail link in Kansas City and as an historic structure which not only brought great economic and population growth, but catapulted Kansas City into position as one of the nation's leading grain and transportation centers.

Ceremonies on July 3 will commence at 9:30 a.m. The program, to be conducted on a show wagon at First and Broadway, will include a band concert, speeches and remarks by mayors of Kansas City, Missouri; Independence; North Kansas City; and Kansas City, Kansas.

Eagleton Among Group Sampling Poverty Diet

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some congressmen, who earn $42,500 per year, are getting an inkling of what it's like to try to feed their families on a welfare budget.

A half dozen House and Senate members are in the fifth day of a six-day program of living on a food allowance averaging 18 cents a day per person for meals.

"I'm hungry," commented Rep. Abner J. Mikva, D-Ill. "You start thinking about eating too much of the time. You're constantly aware of the fact that you're not getting enough to eat."

The congressmen are taking part in a program sponsored by the National Welfare Rights Organization, which is trying to win a guaranteed annual income of $5,500 a year for a family of four.

The congressional wives are leaning heavily on peanut butter, oatmeal and, in some cases, grits to get them through to the end of the experiment Wednesday.

At the home of Sen. Walter F. Mondale, D-Minn., the kitchen cabinets are taped shut to discourage the children from copping between-meal snacks. One youngster tried a little biscuit mix right out of the box.

John McCloskey, 14-year-old son of Republican Rep. Paul N. McCloskey Jr. of California, is "simply starving," says his mother.

But Mrs. McCloskey notes that her family, in contrast to families which live on welfare, was well fed right up to the time they started on the welfare food budget.

"We'll never be able to feel the hunger that they feel," she said.

For the McCloskey family, breakfast is either oatmeal with brown sugar or pancakes made from self-rising flour. Lunch is a peanut butter and honey sandwich with a beef stock soup. Dinner is likely to be meatless spaghetti.

"You don't even go near the produce department," said Mrs. McCloskey. "The only vegetable we've had is cabbage."

Mrs. McCloskey says her teen-aged daughter doesn't mind the diet because she wants to lose weight.

But Mikva said he finds he doesn't lose any weight.

"It's a bloated kind of a diet," he said. "All of us are eating peanut butter like it's going out of style."

Others taking part in the experiment are Democratic Sens. Thomas F. Eagleton of Missouri, Frank Church of Idaho, and Eugene J. McCarthy of Minnesota.

The welfare organization, which is marking its third anniversary, hopes the diet will help win congressional support for its programs.

"I hope it will just make people aware of the fact that there really are people who—on the officially sanctioned welfare budget—cannot get enough to eat," said Mikva.

Brewery Hopes To Resume Beer Production Soon

ST. LOUIS (AP)— Anheuser-Busch, the nation's largest brewery, hopes to resume full beer production by mid-week with the end of a strike that shut down the brewer's seven plants for five weeks.

Approximately 10,000 employes, idled since May 27, went back to work this morning after settlement of walkouts at the Jacksonville, Fla., and Houston, Tex., breweries.

Teamsters locals, representing Anheuser-Busch brewers, signed one-year contracts at both plants over the weekend.

The Jacksonville brewer is new. Ratification of its initial contract resolved the nationwide strike. Details of the settlements were not immediately available from company headquarters in St. Louis.

When workers at Jacksonville truck, members from that local manned out across the country and picketed the breweries still under contract. Anheuser-Busch was forced to shut down its other plants in St. Louis, Tampa, Fla.; Los Angeles; Newark, N.J.; and Columbus, Ohio.

Renato Cueller, business representative for the Houston local, said the new pact calls for a 30 cent-an-hour raise to $4.20 an hour, company increases in the union's health, welfare and pension funds, and increased vacation time.

A company spokesman said the firm had enough beer in storage to begin deliveries relatively soon.

Danforth Sets Procedures for Drug Claims

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth announced today procedures have been set up for Missouri consumers to file claims for overcharges of antibiotics.

Any Missouri resident who purchased aureomycin, terramycin or tetracycline from 1954 to 1966 may file a claim. A fund of over $880,000 will be created to handle claims.

To file, a consumer should send a sworn statement listing the amount of his purchases, or a certified copy of his druggist's statements showing the purchases to P.O. Box 727, Bronx, New York, 10451.

The statement should include total purchases by year of each drug, the pharmacy and any reimbursements received. Danforth said written proof may be required later.

Claims should be portmarked before Aug. 16 and include the name and address of the claimant.

"We hope Missourians who have been required to pay high prices for these drugs will file claims for recovery," Danforth said. "Druggists will be able to perform a valuable service for their patrons by furnishing them copies of back invoices or statements showing the amounts of their purchases."

The attorney general said it will be at least six months before claim payments can be made.

Recovery of overpayments for the drugs was made possible by a recent U.S. Supreme Court ruling that many of the nation's drug manufacturer's conspired to fix prices.

Nixons Get Taste of High Mortgage Rates

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (AP) — Richard M. Nixon and Pat R. Nixon, his wife, hereinafter called the mortgagors, join millions of Americans today in feeling the home financing crunch.

Their first monthly payment of $740 is due on the $100,000, 25-year mortgage they took out May 22 on a home they purchased Dec. 19.

The mortgagors, who also have a Washington residence, are paying 7½ per cent interest on the home loan from Greater Miami Federal Savings and Loan Association. That's less than in some areas of the country, but it's the going rate around Miami.

The Nixons paid $127,800 for the house at 516 Bay Lane, Key Biscayne, according to land records, so the mortgage is for 78 per cent of its value. Greater Miami normally loans up to 80 per cent for conventional mortgages.

The house, which was purchased from wealthy Cuban exile Manuel Arca Jr., is a rambling, pale-blue structure 200 feet from the shore of Biscayne Bay. It is surrounded by 10-foot-high hibiscus bushes and the street is blocked to public traffic by the Secret Service.

The mortgage on it isn't Nixon's only home finance headache—his taxes just went up, too.

The assessment on the house was $56,100 in 1968, but was increased in May to $93,070. The assessment on the house next door, which the Nixons also own, went from $60,650 to $75,860 as part of the pattern of skyrocketing Key Biscayne values.

The property tax bill this year on the two houses will be more than $3,700.

Taxes also are going up on three other Bay Lane houses used by Nixon as part of the little White House complex.

The Huge Salary Hike

A 41 PER CENT salary increase for senators and congressmen became law earlier this year.

Dr. Kershner

President Nixon, having accepted a 100 per cent increase in the salary of the President, sent word to the Capitol that he favored the increase for congressmen and senators. In so doing he missed a great opportunity to win the favor of both his supporters and his opposition. Had he rejected for the time being the President's increase on the ground that in this time of inflation, war and surtaxes, the increase was not in the best interest of the country, he might have won the strong support of the great majority of the American people. If he had rejected the increase in the President's salary, he would have been in a strong position to recommend that Congress do likewise.

The salaries of congressmen and senators have been increased from $30,000 to $42,500, Cabinet members from $35,000 to $60,000 and Supreme Court Justices from $39,500 to $60,000. Lower court judges and agency heads will get substantial but smaller, increases.

Sen. John J. Williams of Delaware said a raise of this size for congressmen and senators would trigger a serious new round of inflation. It would lead to pay raises all down the line in government. He warned that it would cost the taxpayers about $4.5 billion a year.

After the President has accepted an increase of 100 percent and Congress has accepted a 41 percent increase, how can they ask labor, doctors, clerks and all categories of employees to be satisfied with three, four, five or even ten percent? It is unrealistic for government leaders to think they can do this for themselves at the taxpayers' expense, while asking other elements of the population to show more patriotism and refrain from demanding similar consideration.

The public ought not to be asked to pay its government leaders salaries comparable to what they could earn in private industry. All of them have the choice of returning to private industry if they wish. There might be some advantage in replacing them by patriotic men who were willing to contribute more of their time and talents for the benefit of the country. The time was—and not too long ago—when our most competent citizens considered it an honor to be invited to Washington to perform essential work, at a salary of $1.00 a year.

One Dies as Aged Sisters Lose Way Home 2½ Days

CLERMONT, Fla. (AP) — For nearly 2½ days, sisters Katherine and Louisa Freidrich drove through a maze of roads in rural Lake County, trying to find their way home.

They began their journey last Friday. Today, Louisa was in a local hospital. Katherine was dead.

Police said the two elderly schoolteacher spinsters drove almost continuously from Friday afternoon until Sunday night, trying to get home from Tavares, 20 miles away.

Sunday night, they turned onto a dirt road that took them into a vast orange grove where their 1966 Plymouth became mired in the sandy soil.

A power company crew Monday found Katherine, 80, dying in the hot sun of heat and exhaustion. Five hours later, searchers found Louisa, 84, lying in the shade, asleep, a half mile from the car.

Exhausted and incoherent, Louisa was rushed to a Clermont hospital in the same ambulance that had taken her sister's body away.

"It looks like they were too proud to stop and ask somebody to take them home," said Clermont police dispatcher A. B. Broyles.

"They just kept driving asking directions, and driving, but the more they drove, the more confused they became."

Louisa was recovering today but Broyles said she didn't recall too much after they turned into the orange grove.

"We're still trying to determine where they spent Friday and Saturday nights," he said. "It's almost certain they slept in the car, or kept driving. None of the motels in the area put them up."

Clermont Police Chief Prentice Tyndall, with the rescuers who found Louisa, had searched for the women since their older sisters, "one about 86 and the other near 90," called him Friday night.

"They just stayed one step ahead of us," Tyndall said.

He said Katherine's old, cracked leather purse was packed with scraps of paper scrawled over with highway directions.

"They stopped at various places to ask the way home but they just kept getting lost," Tyndall added.

A member of the group that found Louisa said: "She's lucky that power crew was working in the grove. The orange picking is almost ended now and she could have been in there three weeks before anybody from the grove went into that section."

Tyndall said Louisa apparently thought she was at home and, on seeing her rescuers, demanded to know "what are all these policemen doing in my yard?"

A hospital spokesman said Louisa was in good condition but could not recall what had happened since she and Katherine left Tavares. He said she had not been told of her sister's death.

Remodeling Continues at Webb Jr. High

EAST PRAIRIE – As in the past years, the summer vacation is being put to good use in local schools. A major project being undertaken at the present time in the local school system is at the Webb Junior High Building. The building which in the past was the agriculture building is being remodeled and repaired, which includes a new extended roof. When the work is completed it will be divided into three special education classes for the R-2 Schools and junior high music classes will also be held in the building.

Last year when the junior high gym was remodeled, the space between the gym and the shower rooms was utilized and made into added shower facilities and dressing rooms.

Another project at the junior high building for the summer is the painting of the cafeteria.

The high school site has recently had some work done around the athletic field. The field was enclosed with a 6 ft. high, chain link fence. Although no date has been set for the completion of this project, the track, lights and bleachers will be added only as funds are available.

Superintendent, Ray Melton states that the following year's curriculum will be about the same as last. One 5th grade teacher will be added. He also said that again this year as last, a basic home economics course will be offered to 8th grade boys. Last year was the first time this has been done here.

DAEOC Office Has Nurses Aide Class

EAST PRAIRIE - A Nurse's Aide class is being organized to start next month. This will be taught at the local center and anyone interested may contact the DAEOC center.

Senior Citizens meetings are held each Tuesday afternoon at the local center.

Each Tuesday night at 7:30 the Arts & Crafts class meets at the center. Anyone who would be interested in learning any craft may come and we will find a teacher for you.

We are still recruiting for a GED class. Anyone who would be interested in finishing their high school education may contact the center.

Savings and Loan Pays $70,905 In Dividends

CHARLESTON - The Mississippi County Savings and Loan Association this week announced payment of $70,905.53 in dividends to its investors as of June 22, according to Mrs. Glenn Hutson, secretary of the association.

The dividends are paid in two ways, Mrs. Hutson said. Holders of stock certificates receive checks through the mail for their dividends, while passbook account investors have the dividend credited to their accounts.

The June dividend last year totalled $62,864, Mrs. Hutson said, and she added that the December payment was $64,789. The increase, she said, reflects the continued growth of savings invested in the locally managed institution.

Total dividends during the past 12 months have amounted to $135,694, the secretary said.

Midwestern Governors In Conference

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — The Midwestern Governors Conference was to open its formal business sessions today with greetings from Gov. Warren Knowles of Wisconsin, conference chairman, and Gov. Robert Docking of Kansas.

The 15-state conference was formed in 1962 to study mutual problems. Vice President Spiro Agnew will address the governors Tuesday night.

The four-state Ozark Regional Commission of Kansas, Missouri, Arkansas and Oklahoma got in some early work on its special affairs Sunday, besides electing Docking as its chairman Sunday. He succeeds Gov. Dewey Bartlett of Oklahoma.

E. L. Stewart, federal cochairman of the commission, suggested that a regional highway authority be formed to develop such roads as a toll road from Kansas City to the Gulf of Mexico.

Stewart proposed that the authority have nine members, with five of them appointed by the federal government and one each by the four states.

He was authorized to begin consultations with the Bureau of Public Roads. He will report the results at the commission's fall meeting.

Stewart suggested that a state line road might be acceptable, with two lanes in Kansas and two lanes in Missouri.

Illegal Outlay Charged for Safeguard

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration was accused today of illegally spending $400 million from funds appropriated for the discarded Sentinel missile defense system on the revamped Safeguard program.

Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., in a prepared statement, said the Pentagon spent the money on Safeguard missiles and radar equipment although Congress has not approved the project and in spite of a Defense Department promise not to use the Sentinel funds.

"The fact is," Nelson said, "Congress has not authorized or appropriated one cent for the new Safeguard system. The administration's decision to spend Sentinel monies on the Safeguard system is a clear violation of the Congress' law-making authority."

Nixon junked the "thin" Sentinel system, which was designed to protect the nation's major cities, last March and asked Congress to approve the Safeguard system, armed at defending U.S. land-based offensive missiles.

Nelson's blast came after the President had put on his softest velvet glove in an attempt to break the apparent near deadlock in the Senate over Safeguard.

He met for an hour-and-a-half at the White House with five Republican Senate critics of the missile defense system—Sens. Charles Percy of Illinois, Charles McC. Mathias Jr. of Maryland, Marlow W. Cook of Kentucky, James B. Pearson of Kansas and Richard S. Schweiker of Pennsylvania.

Nixon's approach was of the softest soft-sell.

"The President emphasized that each member of Congress would have to exercise his own conscience. I had no feeling of being persuaded," Sen. Mathias said after the session.

Percy called the meeting, which had been scheduled for only 45 minutes, very friendly and said the President didn't even discuss Safeguard until he brought it up.

None of the five indicated any change of mind after the meeting.

With the vote expected to be very close, Nixon needs all the GOP support he can get, but he apprently intends to stay away from blatant partisan pressure rather than chance alienating other senators.

In Nelson's statement today, he said Deputy Secretary of Defense David Packard told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee March 26 that money appropriated for Sentinel would not be spent on Safeguard. But Nelson said that Packard told newsmen May 13 that Safeguard missiles and radars are being purchased with Sentinel funds.

"This is precisely the kind of contradictory stand that contributed to the previous administration's serious loss of credibility with the American people and Congress," he said.

Howard E. Kershner, LL.D.

Dr. Kershner

SEVENTY percent of all Americans drink. This is the finding of a government-sponsored study titled, Alcohol Problems — A Report to the Nation. The report also shows that one-third of all arrests are for drunkenness and almost half of all drivers involved in fatal accidents have a very high level of alcohol in their system.

After citing these figures, the report suggests that there should be more education on the dangers of drinking. Which makes sense. But then comes a shocker. The report concludes that the legal drinking age should be lowered to 18 and that the use of alcohol be included at church functions and in the home—even for children.

The problems caused by alcohol are not caused by the time, the place of the manner in which it is used, but by the alcohol itself. It is a narcotic drug that requires increased consumption to satisfy the craving which it creates. Safety lies in not using alcohol at all.

We need more scientific teaching about alcohol and its dangers. The textbooks of our country used to tell boys and girls about the effect of alcohol on the human system. Each chapter of some physiology books ended by describing the effects of alcohol on the particular part of the body studied in that chapter.

Self-preservation alone should lead us to make a strong effort to warn young people of the dangers of drinking. To approve the use of alcohol in the sacred circles of home and church is, in our opinion, to desert our Judeo-Christian faith. And it is a long step toward the betrayal of our children into the hands of this treacherous enemy of their health, happiness and success.

Storing in Plastic Bag Keeps Oven Rack Clean

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY—When recently cleaning my stove, it dawned on me that I seldom used the second rack but when I cleaned the oven it was always dirty, too. Now I keep this rack stored in a plastic bag, where it is handy if I should need it but I am saved that bit of useless cleaning.—MRS. D. H.

Polly's Problems

DEAR POLLY—I have just become confined to a wheelchair and wondered if some readers would give me some Pointers to help me do more things for myself and around the house. I would appreciate any ideas.—MRS. C. A. F.

DEAR POLLY—Apparently you and Mrs. J. A. G. have never worn contact lenses. I refer to her Pointer for storing them in hair spray can tops. These lenses should not be left in open containers to dry out but should soak when not being worn. Also, tiny bits of lint from cotton padding could cling to the edges. My optometrist passed this information along to me. By following his advice to the letter, I have worn contacts successfully for six years. Somebody goofed, who?—MRS. L. I. Y.

No one, really. Optometrists differ on this point.—POLLY

DEAR POLLY—A gift my bride-to-be daughter received at a shower given for her was a gift certificate from a supermarket. Both she and her future husband were most pleased with this. They know they can go shopping and not have to worry about money the first week they are at home, as they might otherwise have had to do after all the wedding and honeymoon expenses. We enjoy the Pointers and some have already helped the bride-to-be.—MRS. L. G.

Share your favorite homemaking ideas, and send them to Polly in care of The Daily Sikeston Standard. You'll receive a bright, new silver dollar if Polly uses your idea in Polly's Pointers.

Viet Peace 1 to 3 Years Away, U.S. Aides Feel

By RAY CROMLEY
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON (NEA)

It can be reported flatly that key men in the highest circles of government do not expect a settlement on Vietnam short of one, two or three years—perhaps longer.

The signs are more toward two or three years than one.

There is a strong belief in these circles the settlement, when and if it does come, most probably will not occur at the official Paris talks between the North Vietnamese and the Viet Cong on one side and the United States and South Vietnamese on the other.

Rather, a settlement is believed much more likely to come as a result of the now much-publicized efforts at private talks between the South Vietnamese and the Viet Cong.

These talk efforts have not been at all fruitful to date. By all known standards, they have gotten nowhere, so far as is known in American circles. Nevertheless, there is a great deal of optimism here on the possibilities.

The U.S. optimism is based primarily on the belief among American experts on Vietnam that the Vietnamese are extremely pragmatic-practical people and are very likely to find a solution to the thorny political problems inherent in any peace settlement once they put their minds to it. But it will take a long time. Long, slow dickering is a Vietnamese characteristic, especially when the problems are as tough as these are.

It may be that, even when and if results begin to develop from the private talks, U.S. officials may not know what is happening. Both the Vietnamese and Americans are agreed that the less Washington's officials know the better.

The thinking is that once something became known in Washington, regardless of how secretly classified, some American official would be certain to talk "off the record." Such private leaks would get around and could blow the works.

The South Vietnamese know this and therefore are playing their cards close to their chests.

There is no worry here in the administration that the South Vietnamese would sell out their country. So there's complete confidence in the South Vietnamese pursuing their own course privately and secretly while the Paris negotiations go on in public.

The 25,000-troop withdrawal this summer is, of course, intended to buy time in the United States (in Congress and among the American people) for the South Vietnamese to do this secret negotiating.

The way it looks now, if things go right, officials say privately they would expect another 25,000 troops or so will be withdrawn every three to six months, as necessary, to continue buying the extra time it is believed these negotiations will require.

GIs Hold Tom Sawyer Contest In Vietnam

VUNG TAU, Vietnam (AP)—Nobody had caught any frogs for the frog jumping contest, and it wasn't a Missouri rain that dampened the day, but a Vietnamese monsoon.

Still, the greased pig squalled as well as any back in Hannibal and all the contestants got as much whitewash on them as on the picket fence, so it had to be a fine Tom Sayer's day.

No one even cared that some of the Becky Thatcher contestants had beards.

"I've waited so long for this," smiled pretty Dawn Mendias of Chicago, who helped organize the whole thing Sunday for the USO United Service Organizations at this Vietnamese beach resort, a GI recreation center about 40 miles southeast of Saigon. "I'm so happy it came off well in spite of the rain—but that poor pig!" The pig, greased with lard, was a 156-lb sow bought from a Vietnamese farmer. She knew she was too old to outrun her pursuers, so she took cover in a clump of bushes, a good tactic because the 30 young servicemen who charged in after her ran into a hive of bees.

They later maneuvered the pig out and a 22-year-old Seabee from Westbrook, Minn., EO3 Robert Nelson, brought her home to the cheers of a couple of hundred onlookers, including scattered groups of Vietnamese who peeked over a fence and shook their heads.

A red-haired Missouri boy, 19-year-old Pfc. Thomas L. Comstock of Independence, caught her the second time around.

As the USO girls fretted about the pig's health, Nelson and Comstock explained they had caught some greased pigs in their time-at country fairs back home.

Fence painting was next, and Spec. 4 Anthony Banardo, 19, an aircraft electrician from Los Angeles, painted pickets faster and better than his 29 competitors and got the Tom Sawyer award and $100.

He also got to name a representative to the annual Tom Sawyer fence painting contest to be held in Hannibal, Mo., July 5. He chose his 15-year-old cousin, Perry Lee Codianni of Cheshire, Conn. The boy's trip will be paid for by the Hannibal Jaycees, who supplied advice for the contest here, officials said.

The day was capped by a Becky Thatcher contest and first prize went to an Army nurse, Capt. Heidi Ubel of Knapp, Wis., based at the 36th Evacuation Hospital at Vung Tau. She won over a half-dozen other girls and three husky GIs garbed in wigs and miniskirts, their bulk protruding from splits in the seams.

Among the onlookers were wounded servicemen clad in blue pajamas. One of them Spec. 4 Salvatore Scalo, 21, of Somerville, Mass., a machine gunner who was wounded in the thighs by shrapnel June 19 during his eighth month in the war.

"It's great," he said of the shenanigans. "It's the first time I've been able to laugh since I've been in Vietnam."

Man of 44 With Heart of 17 Feels Normal

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A 44-year-old Indianapolis school teacher with a 17-year-old heart says he feels like "nothing's ever been changed."

America's longest surviving heart transplant recipient, Louis B. Russell Jr., is paneling his basement walls, bicycles regularly with his children, and recently climbed up on the roof of his two-story home for a repair job.

A year ago, he says, he was in "bad, bad shape."

That was before he entered the hospital at the Medical College of Virginia in Richmond where on Aug. 24, 1968, he became the world's 34th heart transplant patient.

Russell resumed teaching industrial arts this spring.

He speaks before local clubs and statewide meetings in Indianapolis. He has made dozens of talks since last January and is booked through next February.

Russell said his checkup this month is an exploratory operation to see what condition the heart is in.

After being considered for the transplant last year, Russell talked with his wife and four children.

He decided that "if I didn't survive, I'd be asleep, I wouldn't know anything about it. And if I did or didn't survive, look at the millions of people we would have helped. It was a chance for me and a chance for them. I knew they didn't do this unless you're dying."

Russell added: "I am a Christian. I believe the doctors had a lot to do with this, but I believe God had a lot to do with it, too."

Fitzhugh Unlikely Choice To Head Pentagon Study

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gilbert Fitzhugh says he doesn't know much about defense spending, cost overruns and all that. But based on what he's read, "somebody ought to look into it, and it looks like its going to be me."

This was the reaction of the insurance industry executive—who never served in the military—after being named to head a panel which will recommend changes in the complex Pentagon operation.

President Nixon, appointing the 1930 Princeton graduate upon recommendation of Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird, charged the panel with studying the Pentagon's organization, procurement practices and research and development programs.

Formation of the group—the remaining dozen members or so are still to be named—comes at a time of intense criticsm about wasteful defense spending, sloppy military planning and civilian-military struggle over influence in the Pentagon.

Fitzhugh, a white-haired grandfatherly looking man, told Pentagon reporters he has opinions about such things as antiballistic missile deployment and Vietnam.

But he wouldn't say what his views are and "I am going to try very hard to keep them out of my study."

The purpose of the blue ribbon panel, as Nixon described it, is not to determine national policy but to make recommendations on how the defense establishment can operate more efficiently and effectively.

The year-long study will, as Laird put it, be the most comprehensive review of the Defense Department since the Hoover Commission studies of 1947 and 1953.

"I am confident," Laird said in presenting Fitzhugh to reporters, "that the panel's recommendations will enable the department to perform its national security mission better, and to save the taxpayer money by eliminating wasteful practices of the past."

Laird said a review of the Pentagon's farflung complex "is very much needed in order to restore public confidence in the Department of Defense and the credibility of the Department of Defense."

The panel will be delving into the Pentagon's organizational Labyrinth during a period when, as Laird acknowledged, more responsibility is being turned over to the military in the Pentagon.

About $500,000 has been tentatively earmarked to pay for the panel's staff, although the members will serve without pay.

Fitzhugh said he has no illusions and no preconceived ideas on what should or shouldn't be probed in the course of the review.

The first thing on the panel's agenda, he said, will be to find out "how we are going to attack, to take hold of this tremendous problem."

The group's four-point charter as drawn up by Laird calls for it to study, report and make recommendations on:

—"The organization and management of the Department of Defense, including the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the Defense agencies and the military services ... with emphasis on the responsiveness to the requirements of the President and the secretary of defense."

—Defense research, including mission goals, costs and relationships with science and industry.

—"Defense procurement policies and practices, particularly as they relate to costs, time and quality."

—And other matters may be submitted to the panel in the coming months.

Successor Sought For Dean English

COLUMBIA--Chancellor John W. Schwada of the University of Missouri has announced a search committee elected by the faculty to assist him in seeking a successor to Dr. Earl F. English as dean of the school of journalism.

Dean English, who has headed the Missouri School of Journalism since 1951, reaches the compulsory retirement age of 65 and will retire from the deanship in 1970.

The search committee is made up of Dr. Herbert W. Schooling, dean of faculties, and five members of the journalism faculty: Professors Milton Gross; chairman, W.B. Bickley, Edward C. Lambert, Paul L. Myhre, and Keith Sanders.

The committee will confer with representatives of professional and alumni groups, as well as students, before submitting its recommendations to Chancellor Schwada. Those representatives are Marion Ridings, president, Missouri Press Association, the Advocate-Hamiltonian, Hamilton; Jerry Sweaney, president, Missouri Broadcasters Association, Station KTTS-TV, Springfield; Roy L. Moskop, president, Journalism Alumni Association, Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., St. Louis; and James Holmberg, president, Journalism Students Association.

Wheelchair Driver Exempted From Driver License Law

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Ray Lewis has been given the clearance by Florida's top trooper to speed away in his motorized wheelchair at full tilt — six miles an hour — without licenses.

Several weeks ago a state trooper pulled Lewis, 24, to the side of the road and suggested he get a license plate and a driver's license plate and a driver's license to operate his battery-driven wheelchair.

But Tuesday, Col. H.N. Kirkman, Florida Highway Patrol director, said that whether the law on licenses applies to wheelchair drivers "depends on who interprets the law," and Lewis will not be required to get one.

Symington Urges U.S. Aid for Rain Soaked Farms

WASHINGTON — Sen. Stuart Symington (D-Mo.) today urged federal farm officials in Missouri to assist farmers in Mid-Missouri, who have suffered serious setbacks due to excess rain.

The senator was acting in response to phone calls and a wire he received from farm and business leaders in Audrain and other Mid-Missouri counties.

The Old Timer

"Some people seem to think they can gain rights by committing wrongs."

Sensing The News

WELFARE MOTHERS IN ACTION

Some of the ugliness and moral cowardice on the national scene these days is almost beyond belief. Certainly, it is hard to believe what happened at the recent National Conference of Social Welfare in Washington. Yet it did happen.

The Washington Post was handicapped in its reporting of the shocking events at the conference, for much of what was said could not be printed in a family newspaper.

The 5,000 social workers who gathered in the capital for their annual meeting were subjected to a stream of four-letter obscenities. Members of welfare "rights" organizations jumped on the stage and took over the microphones. They shouted vile words at the audience of social workers. These workers were called "racist pigs" and members of the "white imperialistic oppressive society." Such terms were mild compared to other words and phrases employed. The Washington Post referred to "obscene" demands made by the welfare mothers.

But that wasn't all. When one of the captive audience attempted to lead a mass walkout from the conference room, a human chain of welfare mothers blocked the exits. Dr. George A. Wiley, head of the welfare protesters, declared nobody was going to leave until thousands of dollars were anted up for more of the poor to attend conference meetings. With that, plastic ice buckets were passed around for financial contributions.

The Post reported that it was necessary for the temporary ballroom dividing wall to be removed in order for the delegates to the conference to escape.

This unspeakably crude and insulting session was not the last, however. Wiley and his welfare mothers carried out other interruptions of the proceedings during the remaining days of the conference. Unscheduled speakers, who broke into the meeting, included black social workers, Puerto Ricans, an Indian and a young woman who shrilled that she was a former mental patient and an ex-drug addict.

The social workers apparently were stunned by the experience. One of them told a reporter: "I said to myself this couldn't be happening to US."

As shocking as the behavior of the welfare mothers, was the craven attitude of the outgoing president, Dr. Arthur S. Flemming, who also is president of the National Council of Churches. He didn't order the silencing or removal of the welfare mothers who shouted obscenities of the delegates. On the contrary, against the advice of some of his board members, he refused to stop anyone from speaking. When the time came to turn over the presidential gavel to the incoming president, Dr. Fleming bragged "I did not use this gavel once this week – I didn't think it was appropriate."

The public has no idea what the delegates thought of Dr. Flemming's toleration of obscenity - shouting disruptionists. But many Americans familiar with the story of these shocking events in Washington must be sickened by Dr. Flemming's attitude. The country simply cannot afford mental confusion or moral leniency in confrontations with barbarians. This is what America really faces today, and which was manifested at the social workers conference in Washington -- barbarism.

Educated men and women who refuse to apply the remedies of law and order when confronted by savage behavior, as in the case of the welfare mothers at Washington, are exposing the nation to rule by barbarians.

It is a mistake to think of barbarism and savagery as features of the ancient past or remote jungle areas. Even the most advanced socieities can be exposed to primitivism within. The methods used by the welfare "rights" organizations are manifestations of this primitivism.

In New York City, members of welfare "rights" have attacked city welfare officers, broken furniture and upset files -- all because they weren't getting the size relief payments they demanded. Toleration of this kind of violent behavior is impossible if America is to remain a civilized country. Some people, like Dr. Flemming, apparently regard toleration as the ultimate viture, but it is obvious from the ugly events of our time that excessive toleration is a major evil. It opens the door to the worst excesses in human behavior.

It is time for all Americans to view toleration in perspective and to insist that the organizations to which they belong adopt a get-tough policy with respect to disruptionists.

Mrs. Jules Lederer (otherwise known as Ann Landers) with her husband. Today is their 30th wedding anniversary. "A successful marriage is not a gift, it is an achievement," Mrs. Lederer writes.

Today's A Special Day For Ann Landers

By MRS. JULES LEDERER
(ANN LANDERS)

Dear Readers: This may be just another day to you, but it is a very special day in my life. Thirty years ago, on a sweltering Sunday afternoon in Sioux City, Iowa, Jules Lederer slipped a plain gold band on my finger and I became his wife.

Honesty forbids me describing myself as a student at Morningside College, so I'll simply say I was enrolled there. Jules had had one year at Northwestern — High School, that is. He was a product of Detroit, handsome, energetic, imaginative, a born optimist and eager to take on the world. He had a good job and a promising future. He was also broke.

I was an effervescent, fun-loving girl, hopelessly square, driven by a crusading spirit to save the world — sort of a Jewish Joan of Arc. I was also engaged to marry a law student in California. But Jules, never one to be discouraged by small obstacles, asked me to marry him anyway. I said "yes" and the wedding took place three months later.

We were blessed the following year with a baby girl, Margo. From then on, I saw more of the moving van than I saw of Jules. When an opportunity for advancement arose, he took it. And it seemed always to be in another city. We moved from Sioux City to St. Louis, from St. Louis to New Orleans, from New Orleans to Milwaukee. Then came World War II and Jules served in the Infantry. In 1945 we moved from Little Rock to Los Angeles, from Los Angeles to Eau Claire, Wisconsin, and from Eau Claire to Chicago.

Time, that subtle thief of youth, is often cursed by those who long to stop the clock, or turn it back, but we want none of that. Each year has been better than the last because we have grown together. A good marriage, it is said, is made in heaven. This might be true, but the maintenance work must be done right down here. A successful marriage is not a gift, it is an achievement. No real marriage can exist without differences in opinion and the ensuing battles. But battles can be healthy. They bring to marriage the vital principle of equal partnership. If there is a secret to making marriage work, it is "Never go to bed mad."

Our 30 years together have been blessed with good health, good fortune, good friends, good times and success. Jules says he could not have made it without me. I am not sure he is right. But I could not have made it without him, and of this I am certain. He taught me how to be alone without feeling sorry for myself. He taught me never to back away from a challenge — that it is better to try and fail and then to try again. He taught me how to use my time productively. His work habits are impeccable. I learned mine from him.

Being Mrs. Jules Lederer has been superb training for Ann Landers. Thirty years with this unselfish, supportive, responsive man has enabled me to live life as few people have the opportunity to live it. Being Ann Landers' husband could pose a terrible problem,but Jules has met the challenge with dignity and incredible good humor. My husband is my best friend, and I am his. I consider it a privilege to be the wife of this beautiful guy who took on the world with a ninth-grade education and a hole in his sock.

A & W Celebrates Anniversary

Five decades ago the late Roy W. Allen opened the first of what is now the world's largest chain of franchised drive- in restaurants with more than 2,400 locations.

Using a unique root beer formula, a blend of the juices of 16 rare herbs, barks, and berries, Allen developed a beverage that has come to be known the world over as A&W Root Beer.

A&W Root Beer was first sold by Allen in an outlet in Lodi, Calif., on June 20, 1919. With his first beverage stand an immediate success, he opened a second one a year later in Sacramento, with three more soon to follow.

The third outlet in Sacramento, which was opened in 1923, is considered to be the first "drive- in" in the United States. Located at 16th and "K" Streets, the root beer dispense was mounted on a trailer and car hosts and hostesses were called "tray boys" or tray girls."

The name A&W was actually born in 1922 when Allen joined forces with an employee, Fred Wright. Together they opened three "walk-ins" in Houston, Texas, which were the first under the name and trademark of A&W. This partnership, however, lasted only until 1924 when Allen bought out Wright's interests.

The A&W trademark and trade name were registered that same year, and by 1925 an active franchise program had begun. By the end of 1926, a series of A&W stands were in operation in Northern and Central California and in the Midwest.

Over the years, Allen had several partners and many outlets, but one of his most successful early ventures was his second A&W Drive-In in Salt Lake City. Fabulously successful, it handled nothing but root beer and on hot summer days it is reported that as many as 10,000 root beers were sold.

Over the years, Allen had several partners and many outlets, but one of his most successful early ventures was his second A&W Drive-In in Salt Lake City. Fabulously successful, it handled nothing but root beer and on hot summer days it is reported that as many as 10,000 root beers were sold.

Remodeled and added- to many times, this A&W operated at the original locaton until very recently. Salt Lake City was also the site of the original A&W main office until 1932, when it was moved to Sacramento. In 1936 it was moved to the company's current home office location in Santa Monica, California.

During the early 1930's, there were 181 A&W's in operation, mainly in the Midwest. By 1941 there were 261 A&W's, although the number dropped to 180 just before World War II.

No additional A&W outlets were opened during the War but by 1947 the number rapidly increased to over 238, and by 1950 there were 451.

In June of 1950, Allen sold the business and all assets of the R.W. Allen partnership and corporation to Mr. and Mrs. Hurtz who formed the A&W Root Beer Co. Allen retired shortly thereafter.

Mr. Hurtz was president of A&W until he relinquished that position to Francis R. Loetterle in 1956. Loetterle is currently the president of the company.

Loetterle first joined A&W in 1954 as Executive Vice President. Under his leadership, the number of franchised drive-ins holding the A&W Root Beer license rose from approximately 800 in 1954 to the current number of 2,400.

Interest in the expansion of A&W activities was not confined to the United States. With the support of the directors of the corporation, Loetterle launched an international expansion program in 1956 when the company obtained a Master License for Canada. The first Canadian drive- in was established that year and today has grown to over 160 outlets.

Further foreign expansion came about in the Spring of 1962 with an A& W Drive-In in West Germany. There are now A&W outlets in other parts of Europe, Mexico, and the Far East.

In April of 1963 the A&W Root Beer Co. merged with J. Hungerford Smith, the firm that has produced its root beer formula since 1921. Then in April of 1966 both companies were acquired by United Fruit Company, headquartered in Boston. As a result, A&W Root Beer Co. became a wholly - owned subsidiary of U.F.C.

The management of both companies immediately agreed that it was time for a change -- both in the over-all operation of the A&W chain and in rowth plans for the years ahead.

From its humble beginning in 1919, A&W evolved from a series of "root beer stands" into an international chain of drive-in restaurants. Over the years the root beer "stands" started selling food items as their owners added such menu items as hot dogs, hamburgers, french fries and beef sandwiches. The company itself increased its beverage line to include such other drinks as cola, grape, orange, and lemon in addition to A&W Root Beer. They also made available to franchisees various other food products.

By the time A&W became a subsidiary of United Fruit Company, the chain was operating as a group of drive-in restaurants. However, seeing the need to increase operatons, develop new marketing objectives,and offer more services to the franchisee, the company decided to embark on a bold new program to become a full-fledged restaurant and food service organization. Thus, in February of 1968, the company adopted a modern new trademark and sign, and changed its name from A&W Root Beer Co. to A&W International, Inc.

Included in this program was the decision by management to operate a number of company-owned restaurants. During 1968, the company acquired several existing A&W Drive-In Restaurants and started construction on several new style experimental A&W Drive-In Restaurants. In addition, the company began construction on several Crandall House restaurants, the first full-service type restaurant by the firm. The first two were opened the latter part of 1968, and a third was opened in March of this year -- all in Southern California.

In January of this year (1969), after more than two years without issuing a new franchise, A&W introduced a new franchise offering featuring a totally new building and operational plan. Matched to the coming decade, the new building is called the A&W Model 70. It incorporates attractive decor, inside seating with both counter and booths, plus carpeting, and the most modern kitchen and service facilities. Drive-in car service with electronic ordering, under canopy, is optional. Initially, the company will be issuing these new A&W Model 70 franchises in a few key metropolitan or highly populated suburban markets.

At the same time, new developments are currently coming forth in the areas of operations, food product development, building design, financing, and personnel training, to name a few.

Looking toward the future, President Eran Loetterle states: "A&W is meeting the challenge and potential of the future. We can now provide our franchisees with leadership and know-how to successfully compete with other chains in this dynamic restaurant industry. Even though our firm will be a half-century old next year, all of us here at A&W view this dramatic step we are taking as an exciting new beginning."

Spradling Aids in Transplant Law

JEFFERSON CITY — State Sen. A.M. Spradling Jr., Cape Girardeau, was one of the senators instrumental in getting the uniform anatomical gift act passed by the state legislature.

Spradling and members of the Kidney Foundation of Metropolitan St. Louis, Inc., were present in Jefferson City to see Missouri Gov. Warren E. Hearnes sign the act which makes it legal to will organs of the body for transplantation to others. Until now, the legality of such an act was often questioned by next of kin.

The Kidney Foundation has been working for the passage of the act which would enable kidney transplants to become more common.

A kidney transplant operation has become one of the best alternatives for a patient with chronic kidney disease. The operation itself is sufficiently advanced to warrant it as a cure for the disease which is fatal without the twice-weekly treatments on an artificial kidney machine or a kidney transplant. Treatment on an artificial kidney machine runs approximately $15,000 a year, and while the operation is expensive, it is performed usually only once or twice in a person's lifetime and therefore is the least expensive in addition to being the only cure.

Kidney Foundation chairman in charge of the act, Mrs. Arturo Miserocchi, and Mr. Walter Beckers, president, were present at the signing. Their next immediate concern, they said, is to find blood donors who will be ready to give their blood to kidney transplant recipients.

With the signing into law of the act, the way is now open for Missourians to work toward financial assistance from the state government to ease the burden of those affected with chronic kidney disease. Beckers said a campaign is now underway to ask the state to increase appropriations for such aid.

Coeds Spend Summer Running Wheat Combines

CARMEN, Okla. (AP) — The wheat harvest offers lots of good, hard, grimy work and good pay for a summering college student, with plenty of fresh air — and mosquitoes. What more could a college girl want?

The four Kansas girls running combines in northwest Oklahoma this week say that's plenty — and in their view it sure beats being a camp counselor.

The coeds are earning college money this summer as field hands in the wheat harvest.

Their boss, Larry Paul, 32, of Shields, Kan., reports they are "working out better than the boys."

The girls are Pam Behring, 19; Beth Dondlinger, 19; Mary Becker, 17, and Kathy DeWitt, 18. Kathy is from Goddard, the others from Wichita.

When they came in from the fields at 10 p.m. Monday night they were dressed in work shirts, jeans and cut-offs, covered with dirt, wheat chaff and insect bites.

"I couldn't begin to count them," said Pam, a Kansas University junior, scartching at some bites. "I don't think there's enough room on my body for them."

"One neat thing is we can wear any old thing, like baggy jeans, and not roll our hair. But we sure learned to appreciate water," said Kathy. She attends Pratt, Kan., Junior College.

The feminine crew gets a lot of reaction from passersby on the country roads.

"They just stop and stare — and then wave," said Pam.

Paul reports, "I've sure had a lot more boys apply for work since they've seen my crew."

The girls at first had difficulty convincing their parents. So Larry Paul flew to Wichita to talk to the girls' fathers and reassure them.

Each girl has her "own personal combine" and does all the driving and cleaning, and much of the repair work—despite a final, desperate chorus of warnings from their parents to keep their hands away from the machinery.

"We each have special combines that we drive all the time and then if it breaks down we have to fix it," said Pam. "Boy, do they break down."

You've really never lived until you've cleaned up under a combine," said Kathy.

"My machine is called Ol' Smokey," said Mary Becker. "It's the first one loaded on the semi and gets all black and oily from the smoke."

Beth, a junior at St. Louis University, said that since they're a team of girls, they try harder.

"Everybody said they'd see us in two weeks, but we're determined to stick it out," she said. "I've been going to school all my life and this is the first time I've been able to see what I've accomplished."

Mary, a petite blonde freshman from Wichita State, remarked, "If I do leave, my mother and dad won't know about it until the end of the summer."

Paul said the crew would follow the ripening wheat northward as far as North Dakota before the girls return to school in August. He said the girls are "good workers" and he is pleased enough with their performance to want to try the idea again.

Some of World's Finest Tripoli Mined in Missouri

PEORIA, Okla. (AP) - Tripoli, an abrasive mineral used in all sections of the world, is putting this tiny northeastern Oklahoma town on the map.

Peoria, a town of 156 residents, lies in the middle of the world's richest tripoli mining area, Ottawa County, Okla., and Newton County, Mo.

"This is the only area of the world that has this quality tripoli," said Mine Inspector Ward Padgett.

Tripoli is a rare mineral and a valuable one. Production in Oklahoma last year totaled 32,294 tons, compared with 25,574 in 1967.

Two companies mine the 500-square-mile area, sending raw materials to a processing plant in Seneca, Mo. From there the tripoli is shipped to all parts of the world for use as an abrasive material.

Tripoli is a comparatively soft, porous matieral surface mined in the two-county area. It is used not only as an abrasive, but also in concrete, foundry partings, oil well drilling mud, polishing paste, paint filler, paper and rubber.

Large amounts of the product are exported for the buffing and polishing trade and it is used extensively in smoothing auto paint jobs.

"Tripoli is so rare you don't find it in too many other places in the world," Padgett said.

"And the Oklahoma-Missouri formation is the best quality in the world."

The mineral deposits are seldom more than 12 feet thick with formations varying from 2-20 feet in depth.

Exact tonnagege of the area is unknown, but Padgett estimates the yield at 3.25 billion tons.

American Tripoli Division of Ottawa County holds leases on thousands of acres in the rich tripoli area. It also mines the Missouri formations and operates the processing plant at Seneca.

Also mining in the area is Miami Tripoli, Inc. which began operations in 1967.

Silver Star to Clarkton Soldier

LONG BINH, Vietnam — Army Second Lieutenant Lee D. Robinson, 23, son of Mrs. Jeraldine Robinson, Clarkton, Mo., received the Silver Star May 10 near Long Binh, Vietnam.

Lt. Robinson received the award for gallantry in action while engaged in ground operations against a hostile force in Vietnam.

A platoon administrative officer in the 2nd Civil Affairs Company of the II Fields Force, Vietnam near Long Binh, Lt. Robinson entered the Army in June 1968. He was stationed at Ft. Bliss, Texas before arriving overseas in September 1968.

The lieutenant received a B.S. degree in forestry from the University of Missouri at Columbia in 1968. He received his commission through the Reseserve Officers' Training Corps program at the school.

By direction of the President the Silver Star is presented to Second Lieutenant Lee D. Robinson for gallantry in action on 23 February 1969 while serving with the 7th AA Platoon, 2d Civil Affairs Company, in the Republic of Vietnam. On this date when the Province civilian housing compound came under an enemy mortar attack and ground assault, Lieutenant Robinson twice observed several enemy soldiers attempting to enter the compound and on both occasions, after a fierce fight, he forced them to withdraw.

Finding that one of his men had been wounded, Lieutenant Robinson used his body as a shield to move the casualty to safety and medical assistance. Throughout the intensive engagement, Second Lieutenant Robinson's exceptional courage and unwavering dedication to duty were in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service and reflect great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

Annual Sessions Of Legislature Up to Voters

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The proposition of annual legislative sessions in Missouri now is up to the voters.

Bot houses now have approved a proposed constitutional change calling for a 5½month legislative session in oddnumbered years and a 4½-month session in even-numbered years.

Vetoes by the governor of bills passed in odd-numbered years could be considered by the Legislature at the start of the session in even-numbered years.

Bills left over at the end of the session in even-numbered years would be dead.

The governor could still call special sessions of not more than 60 calendar days.

Several attempts were made to keep bills left over at the end of odd-numbered yearsalive for the next session, but sponsors said although they favored such a proposition they were afraid to amend the proposal and send it back to the Senate this late in the session.

The Legislature could set its own pay, mileage and expenses and could increase the number of its employes.

Technique of Handling Air Traffic Offered

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration has proposed a new technique of handling air traffic to relieve congested air lanes, improve safety and reduce flying times by allowing more direct flights between airports.

The new program, called area navigation and made possible by better computerized navigation equipment, would gradually replace a system that restricts airplanes to narrow routes between navigation stations, in effect making them fly dogleg paths from one radio beacon to the next.

It would allow them to fly through vast areas now unuseable because they are not directly between radio beacons.

In a notice of proposed rulemaking last week, the FAA set out its plan to establish new area navigation routes, or multiple flight paths. Instead of flying from beacon to beacon, airplanes would, in effect, beable to generate their own phantom beacons in a straighter line.

William M. Flener, chief of the FAA's air traffic service, said the agency has a broad development program aimed at putting area navigation equipment into use as rapidly as possible.

"Area navigation gives us a chance to relieve some of the current air congestion on heavily traveled routes and provide better service to the air traveler," he said.

In the early years of aviation pilots followed light beacons, effective only when visibility was good. They gave way to the low frequency radio, which gave courses in four directions from each station.

In the early 1960s a more reliable method of radio navigation came along—the very high frequency stations that provided pilots with courses over a full range of 360 degrees instead of the old four-beam technique.

Hundreds of Cubans Enter U.S. Illegally

MIAMI (AP) — By boat, barrel and bravado, hundreds of Cubans are illegally entering the United States from Mexico.

About 500 are known to have crossed the border at points where from Texas to Arizona during the first four months of 1969. Concerned U.S. officials have stepped up enforcement, and at the same time loosened other regulations, in a bid to stem the tide. They think they're succeeding.

A change last year in immigration law has spurred the illegal entries by lengthening the time Cubans who try to come legally from Mexico must wait for a visa.

The law imposed a 120,000-person annual limit on the number of immigrants who can come to the United States annually from other western hemisphere nations. Previously there was no limit.

The rate of legal Cuban immigration has dropped by more than 80 per cent in the last year, but this does not include the more than 3,000 Cubans a month who come on direct refugee flights from Havana.

Most Cubans get to Mexico City legally. But once there, they are faced with the increasing delays plus the problem of paying living costs while being prohibited by the Mexican government from working. Some are quick to accept offers of help in crossing the border.

One Cuban woman recalled her stay in Mexico City with her two daughters: "In the hotel some Cuban asked me if we want to cross the border. I said 'Yes.' We moved to the border in a bus. There, we went to a hotel and a Mexican came to the group and he says, 'you are Mrs. ...' I said, 'Yes, I am.'"

Then, after paying $600, the mother and daughters were escorted to a hole in the fence at the border town of Nogales, Ariz., and stepped through it at noon on a dark, rainy day.

The trip was more laden with intrigue for a former Cuban dentist who first had to buy his way out of a Cuban prison where he was serving time for currency violations. The dentist, like other Cubans questioned about their border crossings, asked to remain anonymous.

He said he made his smuggling arrangements two days after arriving in Mexico City, but it was six weeks before he got into the United States.

He traveled with five other persons in a chauffer-driven new car to Monterrey, Mexico, was hidden in a motel until night and then was taken by the same driver—this time in an old car—to a farm near the border.

The group met a young man and an old man under a tree, were led single file 400 yards to the Rio Grande and were ferried across two at a time on a wood and canvas raft which had been hidden nearby. The cost to the dentist: $300.

Once inside the United States, the Cubans are safe because they cannot be deported to Mexico and are not sent back to Cuba. But the government is increasingly refusing entry to any who are caught or turn themselves in right at the border.

During April, when officials said 175 Cubans were known to enter illegally, 31 others were turned back. One woman who was turned back said she succeeded in getting across two weeks later, hidden in a lard can.

Immigration Service officials said nearly all the illegal entrants turn themselves in once they are well past the border since no penalties are imposed and they are allowed to remain in the United States.

The service also has eased regulations to make it easier for Cubans in Mexico City to skirt immigration quotas if they can prove they have relatives already in the United States.

Hijackers Report Cuban Imprisonment

HAVANA (AP) — An American Black Panther said today he and other members of his party have been "isolated and imprisoned" in Cuba and they want to leave. He implied that Panther leader Eldridge Cleaver is among the discontented.

Raymond Johnson, 22, of Alexandria, Va., told a newsman he was instructed by a highranking Panther in Cuba to report this feeling.

John more, who described himself as a lieutenant in the Black Panther movement and an airliner hijacker, said: "The Panthers have not been received in a revolutionary fashion. We have been condemned to live in Cuba."

He added that members of the black militant organization had been imprisoned, isolated, banned from Havana and told they could not organize their party in Cuba.

"These imprisonments amount to more than just being confined for a period of investigation," Johnson said.

"Some have been imprisoned a second time. They have been sent to completely isolated sections of the island and forced to work in labor camps."

Johnson said he expected to be arrested at any time, adding: "It is possible some of the Panthers will be arrested today."

The Panther said arrests "always come when they (the Panthers) become disenchanted and after they protest conditions and express a desire to leave the country."

"We would like this information to reach the Black Panther party in the United States so the party will know the unrevolutionary way we are being treated," he said. "We want them to protest at Cuban missions everywhere."

The only Cuban mission in the United States is at the United Nations.

Johnson said he was jailed for 21 days after he hijacked a National Airlines jet from New Orleans to Havana on Nov. 4, 1968.

Johnson claimed that some Panthers who have talked black culture to Cubans have been branded counterrevolutionaries, one of communism's most serious crimes.

He said most of the Panthers would like to go to Africa, but they have been told not to contact African embassies in Havana.

Johnson also said Omar Talif, a party member from New York, and his American wife and child "disappeared" after being told by Cuban officials they were "black racists."

Johnson said he did not know how many Black Panthers currently are in Cuba but he identified four:

Byron Muese Booth of Los Angeles, Calif., deputy minister of defense; Earl Farrow of Denver, Colo., deputy minister of information; Charles Rhaim Smith of Los Angeles, and Lt. James Akili and his wife of New York.

Johnson said all the Panthers he knows have requested permission to leave Cuba. He turned aside questions about Cleaver on security grounds, but added: "An exceedingly high-ranking Black Panther officer doesn't like the treatment of the black revolutionaries and the Black Panthers here at all."

In Miami, the FBI said Johnson was one of the more "vicious" of the hijackers.

"He called the passengers 'economic devils' and stood over the captain throughout the flight, continually hitting him over the head with a cocked .38 revolver," an FBI agent said.

"He knocked the copilot's glasses off and ground them under his heel."

Johnson was a fugitive from an arson charge at Baton Rouge, La., when he hijacked the plane. Earlier, he had been charged there with criminal mischief and criminal trespass. On the latter charge, he was given a one-year suspended sentence.

He recently was indicted in New Orleans on charges of aerial piracy and kidnaping.

HEW Bids to Curb Rise In Medicaid Fees

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Health, Education and Welfare issued new regulations today aimed at putting a lid on the sharp rises in fees paid to doctors, dentists and other individuals under medicaid.

Secretary Robert H. Finch said the regulations would take effect in 30 days.

They would establish the first federal standard for fees under medicaid, the state-administered program of health care for the poor. The program has come under fire for skyrocketing costs and charges of abuse and fraud.

Basically, the complex and technical regulations say fees must be based on what 75 out of every 100 doctors in a given area were charging under medicaid in January 1969. This is referred to in the announcement as "the 75th percentile of customary charges."

States now basing their fees on a lower percentile—on what fewer doctors charge—can raise the standard. States where it is higher must come down only if their standard is greater than the 83rd percentile.

The regulations pertaining only to fees expires July 1, 1970 and Finch said states will be allowed to increase fees only if two conditions are met.

Consumption of distilled spirits in the United States in 1965 reached a high of 292,987,572 gallons, an average of 1.53 gallons per person.

TV to Beef Up Children Shows

NEW YORK (AP) — The past television season was one in which the commercial networks tried to bring original meaningful drama to the adult audience. Next season, it appears, will be the one in which they will share the wealth with the child viewers.

NBC already has announced plans for seven special programs, each an original with a sizeable budget. CBS, which set up a "Children's Hour" as a sort of son of CBS Playhouse" announced Monday details for three Saturday morning specials and there may even be one more if suitable original material can be found.

By now it is well established that Saturday morning on the networks is kiddy time. For a considerable period, each of the three networks filled the hours with solid blocks of cartoons— mostly old short subjects originally made for theatres and hurriedly spruced up with new animated programs.

The generally shoddy quality of those old TV programs for children has been increasingly a matter of criticism. It is logical to presume that current network efforts to upgrade the broadcasts is a response to the criticism.

Network executives prefer, however, to say "it was just something that we felt should be done," or that it has become important to "correct the balance of programming."

Whatever the reason, there has been, at least by CBS and NBC, a marked change in the type of shows seen by upwards of 20 million children up to the age of 13 who watch television Saturday mornings.

By next season, NBC's morning lineup will lean heavily on fantasy. CBS will go in, as it has this season, for comedy. Not long ago, the cartoons that were run and rerun were in that category euphemistically called "adventure," but they were criticized for their violence.

One Saturday morning last March, an estimated 14 million television sets were tuned to stations affiliated with one or another of three networks. CBS's "Archie" and NBC's rerun of "The Flintstones" were competing with ABC's "Spiderman" for attention.

That represents a lot of children, even if there had been only one child watching each set. To divide up to an audience discovered long ago by manufacturers of such products as soap, cereals, candy, peanut butter and dairy products.

Kennedy Has Quiet Trip In Mind

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy is planning a quiet look at Europe this summer, avoiding meeting heads of state who might want to talk with a potential presidential candidate.

Kennedy, the Senate's No. 2 Democratic Leader, expects to take advantage of the August congressional recess for his trip. But he wants none of the fanfare which marked the last trip of his late brother, Robert F. Kennedy, to European capitals.

This trip also promises to contrast sharply with the European tour which Former Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, is on now.

Humphrey the 1968 Democratic presidential candidate and a potential nominee in 1972, will visit England, Denmark, Finland, Switzerland as well as spending a week in Russia. He will make public appearances and may confer with Kremlin leaders.

Kennedy's journey will be made as quietly as circumstances permit as part of an effort to lower the sound level of speculation about his political future.

It is Kennedy's judgment that it is entirely too soon to make any calculation about what is going to happen three years from now. He recognizes, for example, that events—particularly a settlement in Vietnam— could make President Nixon all but unbeatable.

At 37 the Massachusetts senator is young enough and politically cautious enough to wait if 1972 looks like a bad year for the Democratic nominee.

There also is the intervening matter of getting re-elected to the Senate next year. Nobody expects any real difficulty but Kennedy's decision to stick closely to Senate business this year indicates he intend's to take no chances.

Despite efforts to reduce the decibels of personal publicity, Kennedy is finding it difficult to fend off hundreds of proposals to put his views in print and his face on television.

All this doesn't mean Kennedy is retiring to cloister. He is speaking out on such subjects as the draft, aid for ghetto residents and Vietnam refugees.

With the exception of his black about Hamburger Hill and the level of American offensive actions, he has been cautious about Vietnam.

Soaring Sixties Pare 19 Cents off Dollar

NEW YORK (AP) — For the 28th straight month the consumer price index has continued to rise, and now something 19 cents will be spared from the dollar bill during the Soaring Sixties.

The dollar has been pared, in fact, like a big potato, and now you have to toss in a lot more of them to make the stew.

This is the calamity of the great, 100-mile-an-hour price climb. At its beginning almost every American benefited. But now the average family is not keeping even, despite his hefty pay raises.

Labor Department statistics confirm the odd feeling of many people that they are astride a wave going nowhere. The weekly purchasing power of an average worker with three dependents was $78.23 in May. A year earlier it was $78.47.

One effect of the declining dollar value is to produce husband-wife squabbles all over the country, with the husband refusing to believe that his hard work produces so few groceries.

The disputes are likely to get more abrasive, for some of the more recent increases are especially noticeable. Meat prices, for example, are rising. American families love meat, consuming more than 26 billion pounds a year.

Inflation alone is not the only cause in the dollar's disappearing act. There has been an explosion of taxes in America and also— by towns, by states for highways, by the federal government for various commitments.

What have the increases in living costs done to your dollar? Let us assume that in 1960 the dollar was worth 100 cents. Perhaps it really wasn't worth that much, but let us make the assumption.

In 1961 that value of 100 cents was down 1.1 per cent to 98.9. The same loss was recorded in 1962, dropping the value to 97.8 cents compared with 1960.

The fall continued in 1963, but at about the same relatively slow rate, and by the end of the year the dollar bought 96.6 per cent of the goods and services it would have bought in 1960. Another 1.2 cent drop in 1964 reduced the value to 95.4.

These decreases were hardly anything to worry about. They were, in fact, among the lowest declines for any country in the industrialized world. They reflected stability rather than dangerous inflation.

But then inflation did set in, and it cannot be ignored that it dug itself into the economy at the very time the country was digging itself into Vietnam. Military costs were a significant contributor.

An acceleration in the decline first became noticeable in 1965, when 1.6 cents was shaved from the dollar. In the following year the loss jumped to 2.5 cents. By the end of 1967 another 1.8 per cent was lost and the dollar read 89.5 cents.

The decline rose to a whopping 3.6 cents last year, and the dollar closed the year with a reading of only 85.8 cents compared with 1960.

Through the first quarter of 1969 the loss was the sharpest for any similar period in the Soaring Sixties, amounting to 2.4 cents and dropping the dollar to 83.4 cents.

When the figures for the three months ending with June are compiled, very likely they will show a similar amount lost.

This is not a comforting story, but don't forget either: That dollar still is the envy of hundreds of millions of people throughout the world, many of whom would be happy to have dollars worth only 50 per cent of the 1960 value.

Ike's Burial Turns Abilene Into Tourist Attraction

ABILENE, Kan. (AP)—It's a bit staggering — what the burial of former President Dwight D. Eisenhower has done to his home town.

With the summer tourist rush in full swing, the crowds seem to days outnumber the population. Traffic has been so heavy the city hasn't been able to repave and widen s main avenue most used by visitors.

They're coming by the thousands to the place where Ike is buried — mostly crowds of solemn, silent and respectful people of all ages from all over the United States and many foreign countries.

This has created some rather unique new problems, however," agreed City Manager Kenneth Bittel.

He explained the city delayed a key street paving job through the "busy" months.

"But it's beginning to look like they are all going to be busy months'," he added.

Besides the regular tourist business, the Eisenhower center is bringing in many historians, researchers, writers, scholars and others for special seminars and longer periods of work and study.

One example was the D-Day 25th anniversary conference earlier this month, bringing more than 100 VIP's from this country and Europe. Speakers included those who served with Eisenhower and a retired German admiral who disclosed there was confusion on the Nazi side when Allied troops stormed ashore in France.

From the day of the funeral, when some children unthinkingly stripped flowers from outdoor decorations and carried them inside to place on the crypt, young people have visited the chapel in large numbers.

"They don't all come just because they happen to be with their parents," said one guard. "They show a surprising knowledge and interest in the Eisenhower story."

One little girl left a handmade wreath of flowers at the altar with a note which read: "In grateful memory of a great man, our former President and General (Ike) Eisenhower."

Mrs. Mamie Eisenhower, the general's widow, has said she plans to visit Abilene this fall for the first time since the funeral.

Plans also are shaping up for issuance of a "first day" postmark stamp in Abilene on his birthday anniversary Oct. 14. It will go on sale here a day ahead of the rest of the country and Postmaster Henry Smith says advance orders already are being received in large numbers.

Work also is to begin this fall on doubling the size of the Eisenhower Museum to house an ever-increasing number of displays. There already are 7,000 items to see.

While the heaviest traffic is through the burial chapel, a high percentage of visitors also go through the library and museum. Long queues forming outside the Eisenhower boyhood home are not unusual.

"This is one of our finest things, historically," Dr. Wickman said. "It is the original house on the original site, with furniture from the period of Mr. Eisenhower's mother."

But the house was never arranged for a lot of people marching through it. The building has been strengthened, but the halls are narrow, the rooms small and the stairway steep.

Tight Money Trims Price Of Lumber

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lumber prices have ceased to be a major headache to homebuilders. Now they're a headache to lumbermen.

The sky-high lumber prices of a few months ago, which weren't even inspired by public and Congressional outcries, have succumbed to the tight money squeeze.

High mortgage interest costs have depressed the housing outlook and sent most lumber prices to less than half their February level. The lumber industry fears the sag may slow the progress of legislation aimed at taking the roller-coaster effect out of lumber prices.

"If the housing start situation improves, I think we will see frightening increases in wood product prices," Ernest J. Hodges, president of the American Forest Institute predicted in an interview.

A typical plywood item, quarter-inch interior sanded plywood, plunged from $144 per thousand square feet in mid-February to $62 in early June, he said.

But the cost of the raw material—from national forests, where most of the nation's softwood timber stands—rose 135 per cent last year and remains high.

"As a result many mills have closed their doors and cannot reopen them until more timber becomes available, regardless of how the housing market moves," Hodges said.

The recent increase in the prime bank interest rate was bad news for housing, which already had suffered a four-month decline blamed on high mortgage interest rates. Private new-home starts skidded in May to an annual rate of 1.5 million, compared with nearly 1.9 million in January.

Both rates fell far short of the 10-year goal of 2.6 million starts annually, posted by the Housing Act of 1968.

The goal cannot possibly be met if mortgage rates stay up, housing men agree. And when and if interest rates down, the respite for homebuilders and homebuyers may be brief. A housing recovery almost inevitably will send lumber costs soaring again.

Shortages of timber are almost immediately translated into price increases because the government lets its contracts to private operators for cutting on public lands by bidding.

The Nixon administration took several stopgap steps to improve timber supplies when lumber prices went into orbit early this year, but the industry is staking its hopes for improved long-term price stability on the national forest timber supply bill.

This would earmark receipts from timber sales to improve access roads and otherwise increase the output from national forests, while protecting the forest reserves.

Though the important result for consumers and homebuyers would be to eliminate extreme lumber price upswings, the lumber industry is united in the bill's support.

A-Frame of Aluminum

ALUMINUM LEISURE HOME was unveiled in Chicago. Constructed of curved aluminum panels, it is a two-story building that will serve as a vacation, retirement or second home.

CHICAGO (AP) — An "A" frame type home designed for leisure living and built of interior aluminum panels.

Peter S. Pedersen Jr., president of Leisure Home Corporation of America, said the expandable system of adding modular units starts with a standard-size home 32 feet by 23 feet and 18 feet high. It will sell unfurnished for about $6,000, to $8,000.

The principal advantages of the home, aside from the low cost, are the elimination of expensive maintenance problems and maximum resistance to fire, rot, termites and mothmillers.

Designed for summer homes, ski lodges and retirement living, the aluminum home rests on a foundation slab of concrete or a wooden base.

A two-story unit permits two to four bedrooms and a variety of floor plans.

Credit Card Evils

Will the banking community correct credit card evils, or must Washington do it?

That warning question clearly emerged from recent hearings of Sen. William Proxmire's subcommittee. Bankers will be wise to answer it by swiftly cleaning their own house.

An estimated 15 to 20 million people now hold bank credit cards. The most common - and the most valid - objection is that many cards have bone, unsought, to those unable to handle easy credit.

"I am greatly troubled with the ethics of forcing unsolicited and unwanted credit cards into the consumer's home," testified Betty Furness, LBJ's consumer guardian.

Equally concerned is Royal E. Jackson, chief bankruptcy officer for federal lcourts. Jackson says easy credit is "undoubtedly" one reason why personal bankruptcies have risen steadwly - to a disturbing 181,194 last year.

A flagrant - if untypical - example was the Tennessean, an ex-journalist, who armed himself with credit cards, went on an extensive world tour, ran up overseas bills totaling $13,587, then came home and delcared himself bankrupt.

Many consider another evil to be the undue imposition of liability upon card holders.

Some Congressional witnesses cited cases of people held accountable for purchases on credit cards they never received, or for purchases made after the cards were reported stolen.

Andrew F. Billmer, Federal Reserve Board member, countered with this statement.

"Banks generally appear to follow the practice of absorbing 11 fraud losses before the customer accepts the card. In addition, a substantial proportion of banks absorb losses after the card-holder accepts the card, although the card-holder is not usually informed of this policy."

While it opposes legislative regulation or restraint, the FRB does seem unsolicited credit card mailings "objectionable." Miss Furness uses stronger terms, deploring the willy-nilly handing out of "laminated liability."

In 1968, Congress merely explored - but if credit card systems are not improved, federal legislation is likely to be offered next year.

Senator Proxmire has said much more must be done to place liability for credit-card losses or thefts on the issuer, to screen credit ratings of recipients more carefully and responsibly, and to curtail unsolicited mailings.

These are good guidelines for self-purging.

Americans hoping that their federal bureaucracy will become wiser with age can take little consolation in the plight of one British borough. The residents of a subdivision are suffering the pangs of a bewildering "pace system" for street addresses dreamed up by the borough planners.

Postmen, milkmen, grocerymen and laundrymen are finding no end to their troubles of making deliveries to houses designated by their distances from certain intersections. The system locates each house by "paces" rather than the old number system.

The problem, according to one deliveryman, is that no one has revealed just where the pacing should begin. And, the paces have to be exactly one meter (39.37 inches) in length or the whole system breaks down. The shorter deliverymen obviously are at a disadvantage from the beginning.

In a typically bureaucratic manner, however, the planners arre not deterred. lThey're moving ahead with plans to convert every street in the borrough to the pace system.

Bureaucracies, it seems, just get sillier, rather than wiser, with age.

The Nine-Story Yo-Yo

Thirteen-year-old Anthony Cahan may not have made the greatest scientific discovery since Issac Newton took an apple on his noggin, but Anthony's feat will be admired by many a schoolboy, past and present.

Young Anthony, a student at a private school in New York, built wihat his headmaster described as the largest yo-yo in the world and successfully retrieved it a after a nine-story thrust. Faculty members had bet it couldn't be done.

Yo-yomanship is an ancient art, dating back at least to the 1930s, when small boys and girls on their way home from school would get entangled with the latest models of the fascinating toys.

There were small, chubby wooden yo-yos, flat metal yo-yos and sleek, brightly painted yo-yos. In those days kids dropped into corner stores to buy yo-yos, not marijuana and switchblades.

Perhaps Anthony will start a trend back to peaceful pursuits by students. Certainly his accomplishment is a refreshing change of pace from the destructive antics of the human yo-yos on so many college campuses.
